Processing tax returns	139,219	142,989

This appropriation provides for the examination of tax returns, both domestic and international, and the administrative and judicial settlement of taxpayer appeals of examination findings. It also provides for technical rulings, monitoring employee pension plans, determining qualifications of organizations seeking tax-exempt status, examining tax returns of exempt organizations, enforcing statutes relating to detection and investigation of criminal violations of the internal revenue laws, collecting unpaid accounts, and securing unfiled tax returns and payments. Funds are requested to continue the Service's ability to ensure equitable application and adequate enforcement of the tax laws, to promote voluntary compliance with the internal revenue laws, to identify possible nonfilers for investigation and to investigate cases of fraud or financial transactions related to possible money laundering schemes.

Examination.—This activity encourages voluntary compliance with the internal revenue laws through the determination of correct tax liability by the selective examination of tax returns, the correction of errors, and explanation of these corrections to taxpayers.

Appeals, tax litigation, and technical.—The appeals portion of this activity provides for an independent administrative review of contested tax assessments and adjustments with the objective of settling tax controversies without litigation. When settlement is not possible, the tax litigation portion of the activity provides for the handling of Tax Court litigation and for the coordination of the Service's legal position to ensure consistency. The technical activity provides legal advice and assistance to field enforcement activities, furnishes non-tax legal services and provides legal expertise in the issuance of ruling letters; technical advice; publication of revenue rulings and revenue procedures; review of legislation; interpretation of statutes and drafting of regulations.

Employee plans and exempt organizations.—This activity monitors private pension plans to ensure compliance with the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended. Organizations apply for tax-exempt status, which is determined by this activity, through the application of certain tests. By examining tax returns of tax-exempt organizations, it monitors and ensures compliance with current tax laws regarding tax-exempt organizations.

International.—This activity directs the full range of IRS enforcement and assistance programs related to U.S. taxpayers doing business or residing outside the United States as well as non-resident aliens with a U.S. tax obligation; provides technical tax training and administrative assistance to foreign governments; works with States on exchange of information and other programs of mutual benefit; provides compliance and taxpayer service support to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and certain Pacific Island jurisdictions; and manages activities related to tax treaties between the United States and other governments. The International Counsel function identifies and resolves international tax issues; provides timely guidance to the field through both routine program assistance to the Assistant Commissioner (International) and to district counsel and international examiners with respect to specific cases and issues; and provides timely guidance to taxpayers and tax practitioners through the rulings and regulations program.

Tax fraud and financial investigation.—This activity provides for enforcement of the criminal statutes relating to violations of internal revenue laws. It investigates cases of suspected intent to defraud, recommends prosecution as warranted, and assists in the preparation and trial of criminal tax cases. In addition, financial investigations of money laundering schemes involving Currency Transaction Reports are conducted.

Collection.—This activity collects unpaid accounts and secures delinquent returns; develops and implements programs to prevent accounts from becoming delinquent and prevents nonfiling; and determines and analyzes the reasons for and the types of nonfiling.

Document matching.—Through the document matching program the Service matches information returns, such as wage, dividend, and interest statements, with related individual income tax returns. This enables the Service to identify income reporting discrepancies, unsubstantiated deductions, and nonfiling of tax returns and to verify facts and amounts in question through taxpayer contact prior to assessing additional tax or refunding excess credits.

Payment Where Earned Income Credit Exceeds Liability for Tax

As provided by law, there will be instances wherein the earned income tax credit will exceed the amount of tax liability owed, resulting in an additional payment to the tax filer. The Earned Income Credit was originally authorized by the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 (Public Law 94-12) and made permanent by the Revenue Adjustment Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-600). The Tax Reform Act of 1986 increased the allowance for earned income credit.

Under certain circumstances, as provided in 26 U.S.C. 6611, interest is paid on Internal Revenue collections that must be refunded. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-248) provides for daily compounding of interest. Under the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-514), interest paid on Internal Revenue collections will equal the Federal short-term rate plus two percentage points, such rate to be adjusted quarterly. A 10 percent rate will be in effect from January 1, 1990, through March 31, 1990.

Child Care Tax Credit

The President proposes a new tax credit of up to $1,000 for each child under age four in low-income working families. This credit, available to families in which at least one parent works, would be provided to very low-income families in tax year 1991 and expanded to include additional families in subsequent years. For each child under the age of four, families could receive a credit equal to 14 percent of wages, with a maximum credit equal to $1,000 per child. In 1991, the credit would be phased out between $8,000 and $13,000 in income. This phase-out range would increase to between $15,000 and $20,000 by 1995.

The credit would be refundable. That is, if the credit due exceeded a family's Federal income tax liability, the difference would be paid to the family. Families would have the option of receiving the refund in advance through a payment added to their paycheck.

The existing Dependent Care Tax Credit also would be modified. Under current law, parents are allowed a credit for the child care costs incurred in order to obtain or maintain employment. The credit currently applies only to families with sufficient income to pay Federal income taxes. This credit would be made refundable. Families that meet eligibility criteria for both the Dependent Care Tax Credit and the new Child Credit could claim whichever credit best suits their needs and circumstances for each child.

This revolving fund was established pursuant to section 112(a) of the Federal Tax Lien Act of 1966, to serve as the source of financing the redemption of real property by the United States. During the process of collecting unpaid taxes, the government places a tax lien on real estate in order to protect the government's interest. Situations arise where property of this nature is collateral for other indebtedness and the tax lien is subordinate to the original indebtedness. In this circumstance, it is often to the government's interest to purchase the property during the foreclosure sale. The advantage arises when the property is worth substantially more than the first lienholder's equity but is being sold for an amount that barely covers that equity, thereby leaving no proceeds to apply against delinquent taxes. Under these circumstances, if the Government buys the property and subsequently puts it up for sale under more advantageous conditions, it is possible to realize sufficient profit on the transaction to fully or partially collect the amount of taxes due. The revolving fund is reimbursed from the proceeds of the sale in an amount equal to the amount expended from the fund for the redemption. The balance of the proceeds are applied against the amount of the tax, interest, penalties, and additions thereto, and for the costs of sale. The remainder, if any, would revert to the parties legally entitled to it.

The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency was created for the purpose of establishing and regulating a national banking system. The National Currency Act of 1863 (12 U.S.C. 1 et seq., 12 Stat. 665) provided for the chartering and supervising functions in this connection. The income of the bureau is derived principally from assessments paid by national banks and interest on investments in U.S. Government obligations.

The Administrator of National Banks charters new banking institutions only after investigation and due consideration of charter applications. Supervision of existing national banks is aided by the required submission of periodic reports and detailed onsite examinations, which are conducted by a staff of approximately 2,600 national bank examiners. At present, there are approximately 4,300 national banks with more than 26,600 operating branches and total assets of more than $2.0 trillion.

In addition, the Comptroller considers applications for mergers in which the resulting bank will be a national bank and applications from banks to establish branches. The Comptroller of the Currency also promulgates rules and regulations for the guidance of national banks and bank directors.

The Office of Thrift Supervision was created by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 1811 note). The Office assumed the regulatory functions of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board dissolved by the same act.

The Office charters, regulates and examines Federal thrifts, all of which are insured by the Savings Association Insurance Fund. In addition, the Office cooperates in the examination and supervision of State-chartered thrifts insured by the Savings Association Insurance Fund. The Office sets capital standards for Federal and State thrifts and reviews applications of State-chartered thrifts for conversion to Federal thrifts. It also reviews applications for establishment of branch offices.

Income of the bureau is derived principally from assessments on thrifts, examination fees and interest on investments in U.S. Government obligations. At present, the Office oversees more than 2,900 thrifts with more than 18,000 operating branches and total assets of more than $1 trillion.

This appropriation provides for the payment of compensation benefits to veterans and survivors. Previously, funds for this program were appropriated under the title "Compensation and Pensions."

The authorizing statute requires the Secretary to make payments to veterans and survivors who meet eligibility requirements. Therefore, obligations are incurred through the use of permanent contract authority. An annual appropriation is required to liquidate (pay) these obligations.

Compensation is paid to veterans for disabilities incurred in or aggravated during active military service. Death and Indemnity Compensation (DIC) is paid to survivors of servicepersons or veterans whose death occurred while on active duty or as a result of service-connected disabilities.

The Secretary may pay a clothing allowance to each veteran who uses a prescribed medication for a service-connected skin condition, or wears a prosthetic or orthopedic appliance (including a wheelchair) which, in the judgment of the Secretary, tends to damage or tear the clothing of such veteran.

The "Veterans' Benefits Amendments of 1989" increased compensation rates for veterans, DIC rates for spouses and children, and the veterans' clothing allowance by 4.7 percent effective December 1, 1989.

Caseload and cost tables are shown below and reflect the 4.7 percent rate increase:

Legislation will be proposed to index compensation benefits to the annual change in the Consumer Price Index. If enacted, this proposal would guarantee a full and timely cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) to all compensation beneficiaries, including DIC spouses and children. The increase, which would be effective with the payments made on January 1, 1991, is expected to be 3.9 percent and cost $347.3 million in fiscal year 1991.

In addition, legislation will be proposed to place a limitation on the estates of incompetent veterans with no dependents. Under this proposal, benefit payments would be discontinued when the assets of a veteran reached $25,000. Payments would be resumed when assets are reduced to $10,000, and would continue until $25,000 is once again accumulated. The purpose of this proposal is to assure that remote heirs of incompetent veterans do not inherit large sums of veterans benefits. The savings expected from this proposal is $170.7 million in fiscal year 1991.

The table above reflects the net cost of these proposals.

This appropriation provides for the payment of pension benefits to veterans and survivors. Previously, funds for this program were appropriated under the title "Compensation and Pensions."

The authorizing statute requires the Secretary to make payments to veterans and survivors who meet eligibility requirements. Therefore, obligations are incurred through the use of permanent contract authority. An annual appropriation is required to liquidate (pay) these obligations.

Pension benefits may be paid to veterans or their survivors. Veteran's entitlement is based on active duty service of a specific length (normally 90 days or more) during a designated war period; disabilities considered permanent and total; and countable income below established levels. There is no disability requirement for survivor cases. Income support is provided at established benefit levels.

Veterans who are under the age 45 and are in receipt of disability pension will be evaluated to determine whether a vocational goal is reasonably feasible. Those for whom a vocational goal is feasible prior to January 31, 1992, are eligible for a temporary program of vocational training.

Automatic annual cost-of-living increases comparable to annual social security increases are provided for those pensioners in the improved program and to parents receiving dependency and indemnity compensation. These increases, effective with payments made on January 1, are based on the same percentage as increases in social security benefits. The January 1, 1991 increase is expected to be 3.9 percent.

Legislation will be proposed to allow the Department of Veterans Affairs to have access to records of the Internal Revenue Service for the purpose of verifying the income of pension beneficiaries. This proposal is expected to save $61.0 million in FY 1991.

In addition, legislation is also being proposed to change the period, from three months to twelve months, before a hospitalized veteran has pension payments reduced to $90 a month. The cost of this proposal is projected to be $13.5 million in FY 1991.

The above table reflects the net savings from these two proposals.

This appropriation finances the education and training of veterans and servicepersons whose service was, at least in part, between February 1, 1955 and December 31, 1976 (post-Korean conflict veterans and Vietnam era veterans). It also finances educational assistance allowances for certain peacetime veterans and for eligible dependents of those veterans: (a) who died from service-connected causes or have a total and permanent rated service-connected disability; and (b) servicepersons who were captured or missing in action. In addition, certain disabled veterans are provided with vocational rehabilitation, specially adapted housing grants, and automobile grants with the associated approved adaptive equipment. The funding level in 1991 will be $4.7 million more than in 1990. This is due primarily to the increases in vocational rehabilitation trainees and the average benefit payments.

Education and training.—The 1990 decrease in Vietnam era veteran and serviceperson trainees is attributable to veterans having used their entitlement or reaching their delimiting date.

The following table provides a comparison of trainees and costs for the three types of trainees included in education and training.

Special assistance to disabled veterans.—Service disabled veterans requiring vocational rehabilitation receive assistance to cover the costs of subsistence, tuition, books, supplies, and equipment.

Specially adapted housing grants, up to a maximum of $38,000, are provided to certain severely disabled veterans. Veterans who suffer service-connected blindness or who have lost the use of both upper extremities can receive up to $6,500.

An allowance, up to a maximum of $5,500, is provided to certain service-disabled veterans and servicepersons toward the purchase price of an automobile. Adaptive equipment and the maintenance and replacement of such equipment is also provided.

The following table shows a caseload and cost comparison for these beneficiaries.

All Volunteer Force educational assistance (Montgomery GI Bill).—Public Law 98-525, enacted October 19, 1984, established two new peacetime educational programs: an assistance program for veterans who enter active duty during the period beginning July 1, 1985, and ending on June 30, 1988, and an assistance program for certain members of the Selected Reserve. Public Law 100-48 made these programs permanent. The Readjustment benefits appropriation pays the basic benefit allowance for the peacetime veterans. Supplementary educational assistance for peacetime veterans and the basic benefit allowance for reservists are financed by payments from the Department of Defense and the Department of Transportation.

The purpose of the VA home loan guaranty program is to facilitate the extension of mortgage credit on favorable terms by private lenders to eligible veterans. As of January 1, 1990, the guaranty on all new loan originations will be provided by the Guaranty Indemnity Fund (GIF), except for manufactured home loans. Guaranty amounts made prior to the establishment of the new Fund will be paid from the Loan Guaranty Revolving Fund (LGRF) in case of foreclosure. The following Federal guaranty protects lenders against losses: (a) for loans of $45,000 or less, 50 percent of the loan is guaranteed; (b) for loans greater than $45,000, the lesser of 40 percent or $36,000 is guaranteed (with a minimum of $22,500); and (c) for manufactured homes, the lesser of 40 percent or $20,000 is guaranteed.

Individual homes:
Number of claims	42,070	32,965	29,759

Budget program—

Direct loans to veterans.—Direct loans are made to certain totally disabled veterans to supplement grants authorized to assist the veteran in acquiring suitable housing units, with special features made necessary by the nature of their disabilities.

In 1991, VA expects to close one direct loan in the amount of $33 thousand.

This fund finances the payment of claims on nonparticipating life insurance policies issued and currently is open for new issues to veterans having service-connected disabilities. The program provides insurance coverage for service-disabled veterans at standard rates. Administrative expenses are paid from the General operating expenses appropriation.

Operating costs—

Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

All other.—Represents payments to policyholders who surrender their policies for their cash value and hold endowment policies which have matured.

Capital investment.—A policyholder may borrow up to 94 percent of the value of his policy.

The trend in the number and amount of policies in force is indicated in the following table (dollars in thousands):

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Number of policies	173,273	169,880	166,243
Insurance in force	$1,571,833	$1,541,593	$1,509,153

Financing.—Operations are financed from premiums and other receipts. Additional funds are received by transfer from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation, instead of direct appropriations to this fund.

Operating results and financial condition.—Since premium and other receipts are insufficient to cover operations, the fund continues to project liabilities in excess of assets. The deficit is expected to reach an estimated $378 million by September 30, 1991.

Note.—The Department of Veterans Affairs insurance policy loans are not an extension of Federal credit. Credit schedules previously shown for this account have been discontinued.

This fund pays claims and administrative costs on participating life insurance policies issued during the period May 1, 1965, through May 2, 1966, under three life insurance programs: (1) service-disabled standard insurance, (2) service-disabled rated insurance, and (3) nonservice disabled insurance availing disabled World War II and Korean conflict veterans an opportunity to acquire life insurance coverage who were no longer eligible for other Government insurance.

Budget program—

Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

Dividends.—Policyholders participate in the distribution of annual dividends.

All other.—This represents payments to the General operating expenses appropriation for the administrative costs of processing claims and maintaining the accounts, and to those policyholders who: (a) surrender their policies for cash value; (b) hold endowment policies which have matured; and (c) have purchased total disability income coverage and subsequently become disabled.

Policy loans made.—A policyholder may borrow up to 94 percent of the cash value of his policy at an interest rate adjusted to reflect private sector borrowing costs.

The following table reflects the decrease in the number of policies and the amount of insurance in force (dollars in thousands):

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Number of policies	123,657	120,070	116,040
Insurance in force	$847,373	$824,370	$808,380

Financing.—Operations are financed from premiums collected from policyholders and interest on investments. Excess earnings of the fund are now distributed to the policyholders in the form of an annual dividend.

This account consists of voluntary contributions by eligible servicepersons and matching contributions provided by the Department of Defense. The fund provides educational assistance payments to participants who entered the service after December 31, 1976, and are pursuing training under chapter 32, title 38, U.S.C. Public Law 96-342, the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1981, added two educational assistance programs for certain individuals who enlisted or reenlisted in the Army, Navy, Air Force or Marine Corps after September 30. 1980 and before October 1, 1981. Section 901 of that act is a non-contributory program with educational assistance provided by the Department of Defense. Section 903 authorizes the Department of Defense to make monthly contributions for certain post Vietnam-era participants. Public Law 98-525, enacted October 19, 1984, precluded new enrollments into this program during the period July 1, 1985 to June 30, 1988. Public Law 99-576, enacted October 28, 1986, closed the program permanently for new enrollments but provided a grace period for new enrollments of eligible servicepersons until March 31, 1987. The estimated activity in the fund follows:

The income of the fund is derived from premium receipts, interest on investments, and payments which are made to the fund from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation.

Assets of the fund, which are largely invested in special Treasury interest-bearing securities and in policy loans, are expected to increase from $11,973 million as of September 30, 1990 to $12,102 million as of September 30, 1990. The actuarial estimate of policy obligations as of September 30, 1991, total $12,035 million, leaving a balance of $67 million for contingency reserves.

This fund was established in 1919 to receive premiums and pay claims on insurance issued under the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act. The general decline in the activity of the fund is indicated in the following table (dollars in thousands):

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the extent possible except that administrative expenses are charged to the General operating expenses account.

The income of the fund is derived from interest on investments and payments from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation. Effective January 1, 1983, premiums were discontinued since reserves held in the fund were adequate to meet future liabilities of the program.

Assets of the fund, which are largely invested in interest-bearing securities and policy loans, are estimated to decrease from $179 million as of September 30, 1990, to $157 million as of September 30, 1991, as an increasing number of policies mature through death or disability. The actuarial evaluation of policy obligations as of September 30, 1990, totals $153 million, leaving a balance of $4 million for contingency reserves.

Note.—The Department of Veterans Affairs insurance policy loans are not an extension of Federal credit. Credit schedules previously shown for this account have been discontinued.

This fund finances the payment of claims on life insurance policies issued before January 3, 1957, to veterans who served in the Armed Forces subsequent to April 1, 1951. No new policies can be issued. Policyholders may elect to purchase total disability income coverage with the payment of additional premiums.

Budget program—

Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

Cash surrenders.—A policyholder may terminate his or her insurance by cashing in the policy for its cash value.

Dividends.—Policyholders participate in the distribution of annual dividends.

All other.—Classified in this category are payments to policyholders who: (a) hold endowment policies which have matured; (b) have purchased total disability income coverage and subsequently become disabled; and (c) are paid interest on dividend credits and deposits.

The following table reflects the decrease in the number of policies and the amounts of insurance in force (dollars in thousands):

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Number of policies	306,030	296,130	285,790
Insurance in force	$2,838,748	$2,795,219	$2,749,699

Financing.—Payments from this fund are financed primarily from premium receipts and interest on investments.

Operating results and financial condition.—Favorable mortality experience on insurance written against this fund has kept death claim payments well below the amount of premium and interest receipts, thereby producing an annual increase in the total revenue of the fund. Excess earnings of the fund are now distributed to the policyholders in the form of an annual dividend.

The requested resources for 1990 and 1991 will provide quality health care to the estimated number of veterans seeking care on a system-wide basis and adequate levels of equipment and other items. By the end of 1991, the annual workload is expected to increase by 25,000 inpatients treated and 750,000 outpatient visits.

In 1991 increased costs are associated with: (1) operational requirements of new facilities; (2) payroll increases; (3) increased cost of drugs, utilities, communications, provisions, prosthetics, medical and dental supplies, operating supplies, relocation expenses; (4) unit dose, drug treatment programs, quality assurance enhancements, and elimination of nurse rotating tours.

These increased costs are offset by savings associated with enhancements to the Integrated Supply Management System and other procurement efficiencies; modernization of the Federal Telecommunications System; and a redirection of resources from existing programs to fund new quality medical care initiatives (mentioned above).

Legislation is being proposed that would reduce unnecessary costs by: (1) raising from $500 to $1,000 the limit of dental treatment that may be performed on a fee basis by a private dentist without the requirement for a second opinion; (2) providing limited outpatient, rather than on an inpatient basis, dental treatment to veterans who are scheduled to have certain hospital treatments; and (3) providing dental treatment to veterans who are currently active in a VA treatment program but have no direct entitlement to dental care.

Legislation also is being proposed to: (1) furnish outpatient dental care to World War I veterans and all former Prisoners of War; (2) provide oral health care to veterans receiving VA Hospital Based Home Care; (3) revise the VA nurse pay system; (4) allow Saturday premium pay for nursing assistants; (5) provide renovation/construction costs for child care centers at VA facilities; and (6) increase the amount of special pay for physicians and dentists.

Public Law 99–272 provided authorization to recover payments incurred by veterans without a service-connected disability who are covered by health insurance. Legislation is proposed to establish a special VA account to receive these payments from which an amount may be appropriated to provide for the billing and collections of the payments. All unappropriated balances in this special account would be transferred to the Treasury. Legislation is being proposed to transfer recurring collection—related resources from the Medical Care appropriation to this new appropriation. Legislation is further proposed to offset partially the rising cost of medical care by: (1) requiring veterans without service-connected disabilities, in the middle or higher income categories, to make a nominal co-payment per outpatient visit ($5-$10) and per outpatient prescription ($3-$5); (2) requiring veterans without service-connected disabilities, in middle and higher income categories, to make a nominal per diem payment ($9) for inpatient treatment; and (3) authorizing reimbursement for third-party health insurers for treatment of non-service-connected disabilities of insured veterans who have relatively minor service-connected disabilities. These proposals are expected to result in an additional $112 million in offsetting receipts in 1991.

The Medical and Prosthetic Research account is comprised of the following three programs:

Medical research.—This program is comprised of institutional and special research. In addition to the broad spectrum of biomedical research projects, priority is given to research Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome and conditions that frequently occur among veterans such as aging, alcoholism, schizophrenia, delayed stress disorders and other mental illness, and spinal cord injury and tissue regeneration. Cooperative studies include surgical treatment of angina pectoris, adjunct treatment of diabetes, and relative potency and side-effect liability of new and marketed sedatives. In 1990, the Department of Defense will provide $20 million to support a cooperative medical research program.

Rehabilitation research.—This program is dedicated to the development and application of science and technology to improve the care of the physically disabled veteran through prostheses for the amputee, improved wheelchairs for the paralyzed, and better joint functions for the arthritic. It also includes care for those with visual, hearing and speech disorders.

Health services research.—This program provides support for health services projects at Department of Veterans Affairs medical centers for improving the effectiveness and economy of delivery of health services and improving the accessibility of services to veterans.

In support of the research activities of these three programs, VA applies a variety of budgetary resources including appropriations from the Medical Care account, reimbursements from the Department of Defense, and grants from the National Institutes of Health. Private proprietary grants as well as grants from voluntary agencies provide additional support for VA's research activities. The following table summarizes all budgetary resources for the Medical and Prosthetic Research account.

Currently, the Department is authorized under 38 U.S.C. Section 629, to recover the costs of medical care from certain third parties. Under proposed legislation: (1) a new account would be established to reflect the billing and collection activities in the Department of Veterans Affairs third-party medical recoveries program, (2) direct billing and collection activities would be funded out of the total annual collections from third parties (amounts collected in excess of costs would continue to be deposited in the Treasury), and (3) authority to collect from third-parties would be expanded to health insurers of service-connected veterans for treatment of nonservice connected illnesses. In 1991 only, these activities will be funded in part by a transfer of funds and staff from the medical care account. This transfer simply reflects a redirection of resources devoted to third party billing and collections from the medical care appropriation request to the new third party account.

Under the provisions of 38 U.S.C. 5021, the Supply Fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, the cost of warehouse inventories at depots and field stations and selected items of equipment procured centrally. It also finances, on the same basis, items and services to other Federal agencies who either request or are assigned to the Department of Veteran Affairs for support by the Office of Federal Procurement Policy.

Budget program.—The Fund provides financial support for: (1) maintenance of depot and field station inventories; (2) maintenance and operation of three supply depots; (3) operation of a service and reclamation program operating out of the supply depots; (4) centralized periodical procurement; (5) a marketing center or central buying office; (6) a prosthetic distribution center; and (7) a publications depot that provides forms for VA installations on a centralized basis.

The Supply Fund does not finance costs for the operation and administration of supply activities at VA field stations. These costs are charged directly to applicable appropriations.

Financing.—Costs of supplies, equipment, and services acquired through the Supply Fund and Supply Fund operating costs are recovered through reimbursements from the VA appropriations and other Government agencies receiving goods and services. For 1991 Supply Fund sales are estimated to reach $960 million. Average inventory needed to support those sales will be $140 million.

Operating results.—The Fund operated at a loss of $3.7 million in 1989. The new total of retained earnings is $50.3 million, which has been used to finance inventory growth. Operating expense as related to sales was 5.2 percent.

This appropriation provides EPA audit and investigative functions to identify and correct management and administrative deficiencies that create conditions for existing or potential instances of fraud, waste, and mismanagement. The audits function provides contract audit, internal audit, and grant audit services. Contract audits provide professional advice to agency contracting officials on accounting and financial matters relative to the negotiation, award, administration, repricing, and settlement of contracts. Internal audits review and evaluate all facets of agency operations. Grant audits focus on the effectiveness of individual projects, reasonableness of costs, and adequacy of management systems. The investigative function provides for the detection and investigation of improper and illegal activities involving programs, personnel, and operations.

This appropriation finances research and development contracts, grants, intergovernmental agreements, and purchases of scientific equipment. These activities provide the scientific basis for EPA's regulatory actions.

Air.—Research will provide the data base needed to support national ambient air quality standards and establish new source performance standards and emission standards for hazardous air and mobile source pollutants. Research will also be performed to support the indoor air, global change, and stratospheric ozone depletion research programs.

Water quality.—Research activities include gathering scientific data pertaining to toxic pollutants, developing guidelines for establishing site-specific water quality standards, support to the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System, and assessing the impact of various wastes when dumped into the ocean. Research is also performed in wastewater treatment technology, oil spills and wetlands.

Drinking water.—Research includes evaluating the health effects of drinking water contaminants, methods to treat these contaminants in a cost-effective manner, and research to support the Agency's ground water protection program.

Hazardous waste.—Research activities include providing hazardous waste measurement methods and protocols, assessing the risk from exposure to hazardous wastes, and developing the necessary data to revise and implement treatment, storage and disposal standards and regulations.

Pesticides.—Research activities provide scientific data to support the Pesticides Program by means of health and environmental exposure studies, the development of exposure protocols, and the quality assurance program. Biotechnology research is also included in these activities.

Radiation.—Activities include demonstrations of non-regulatory techniques to mitigate radon in new and existing homes and schools and radiological monitoring and surveillance services for the Department of Energy nuclear testing program at the Nevada Test Site.

Multimedia.—Research activities provide support for long-term research, risk assessment guidelines, technology transfer, quality assurance, research to reduce uncertainties in risk assessments and procurement of laboratory equipment.

Toxic substances.—Activities support the development of scientific and technological methods to understand, predict and manage the entry and movement of chemicals in commerce and into the environment and to determine the effects of these chemicals on both human health and the environment.

Energy.—Activities relate to understanding and assessing the causes and effects of acid precipitation.

This appropriation includes funds for contracts, grants, and cooperative agreements for pollution abatement, control, and compliance activities.

Air.—The air program sets standards for: ambient air quality; emissions of hazardous air pollutants; emissions from new stationary sources; motor vehicle emissions; and prevention of significant deterioration of air quality. The focus of 1991 activity will be on implementation of the President's comprehensive proposal to amend the Clean Air Act.

Water quality.—The water quality program has as its goal the protection and restoration of the Nation's waters. The program relies on a partnership between EPA and the States to meet the goals of the Act. The program encompasses the following major activities: (1) developing water quality standards; (2) establishing technology-based and water quality-based effluent limits for point-source discharges; (3) monitoring water quality; (4) developing guidelines for advanced identification of wetlands and programs to enhance State and local wetlands protection; (5) targeting abatement activities to protect critical habitats through geographic initiatives; (6) developing compliance and enforcement agreements to end ocean disposal of industrial waste and municipal sludges, as well as monitoring existing dump-sites; (7) issuing and enforcing requirements of National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permits for industrial and municipal sources; and, (8) managing the municipal wastewater facilities construction grants and State Revolving Fund programs.

Drinking water.—The safe drinking water program protects the Nation's drinking water supplies from contaminants. This involves: (1) setting national drinking water standards that protect human health; (2) assisting States and Indian tribes in implementing or directly implementing these regulatory programs; (3) initiating enforcement actions for compliance with drinking water and underground injection control regulations; and, (4) directing the Agency's activities to manage and improve ground water quality.

Hazardous waste.—The hazardous waste program is designed to ensure that hazardous wastes are managed in a manner that protects public health and the environment. Continued emphasis will be placed on the development of regulations and standards to support areas such as underground storage tanks, corrective action for prior releases at solid and hazardous waste facilities, land bans, hazardous waste identification, and solid waste management. Similarly, the program will emphasize delegation of authority to the States and accelerate permitting, enforcement of hazardous waste regulations, and corrective action. State assumption of hazardous waste authorities will be encouraged through Federal financial assistance, regulations, and guidance.

Pesticides.—EPA is responsible for protecting public health and the environment from unreasonable pesticide risks, taking into account the economic, social, and environmental costs and benefits from pesticide use. Major activities include: (1) review and registration of pesticide products; (2) developing and processing registration standards; (3) enforcement of pesticide use rules, with emphasis on Federal/State cooperation; and, (4) developing guidelines to ensure the protection of pesticide workers, as well as assisting in the development of State plans for pesticide use that will protect ground water and endangered species.

Radiation.—The radiation program endeavors to eliminate adverse health and environmental effects by limiting exposure to radiation. Major activities include development and promulgation of standards, regulations, and guidelines to reduce exposure from radiation sources. Also, the EPA will work with the Department of Energy to assess risks associated with high levels of naturally occurring radon, provide technical assistance and guidance to states on radon, and continue a three-year Federal grant program to assist the development of state radon programs.

Multimedia.—The multimedia program is composed of several activities that cut across media programs. This involves: (1) review of environmental impact statements (EIS) to ensure that actions taken by Federal agencies do not adversely affect the environment; (2) Federal agencies compliance with statutes and regulations for pollution control; and, (3) all legal aspects of the Agency's enforcement efforts.

Toxic substances.—The toxic substances program is responsible for protecting human health and the environment from unreasonable risks posed by chemicals. The program places a balanced emphasis on evaluation and control of new and existing chemicals. Nonregulatory approaches to obtain compliance are used where appropriate. It also disburses funding appropriated for grants and loans under the Asbestos School Hazard Abatement Act of 1984, and provides technical assistance to implement various requirements of Title III of the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986 relating to chemical releases. The program is building state capabilities, including enforcement, through technical assistance and Federal financial assistance.

Management and support.—Funds contract work for policy studies in the management and support program.

This appropriation provides funds for the implementation of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980, as amended by the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986. This Act provides authority for responding to and cleaning up hazardous substance emergencies and abandoned uncontrolled hazardous waste sites.

There are four basic components to the Superfund program: Hazardous Substance Response; Enforcement; Research and Development; and Management and Support. These components will be integrated and coordinated to ensure the wisest use of Fund money in order to achieve the greatest possible cleanup.

Financial responsibility for the program will be shared by the Federal and State governments as well as industry. EPA will allocate funds from its appropriation to other Federal agencies to carry out the Act.

The Leaking Underground Storage Tank (LUST) Trust Fund, authorized by the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986 (Public Law 99–499), provides funds for responding to releases from leaking underground petroleum tanks. The Trust Fund is financed by a 0.1 cent a gallon tax on motor fuels, that became effective January 1, 1987.

EPA oversees the cleanup program, which is implemented by the States. Funds are allocated to the States through cooperative agreements to clean up those sites posing the greatest threat to human health and environment. The Trust Fund also covers administrative expenses necessary to carry out the program.

The Federal Buildings Fund finances the activities of the Public Buildings Service which provides space and services for Federal agencies in a relationship similar to that of landlord and tenant.

The Fund, established in 1975, replaces direct appropriations by using income derived from rent assessments which approximate commercial rates for comparable space and services. Rent and other income to the fund is as follows:

The Federal Buildings Fund program consists of the following activities financed from rent charges:

Construction and acquisition of facilities.—Space is acquired through direct federally-financed construction of facilities, prospectus-level extensions to existing buildings and direct purchase of facilities. All costs directly attributable to Federal Buildings Fund construction projects for site acquisition and construction are financed under this activity. The total cost of new commitments for direct federally-financed construction and acquisition of facilities is estimated at $139 million in 1990 and $271 million in 1991.

Repairs and alterations.—Repairs and alterations of public buildings are funded under this activity. Protection of the Government's investment, health and safety of building occupants, transfer of agencies from leased space, and cost effectiveness are the principal criteria used in establishing priorities. Primary consideration is given to repairs to prevent deterioration and damage to buildings, their support systems, and operating equipment. This activity also provides for conversion of existing facilities and non-prospectus extensions.

Design and construction services.—This activity consolidates funding for the full range of design and construction services including preparation of drawings and specifications, management and inspection of construction and repairs and alterations projects, other construction related costs and non-project related technical services. In the case of prospectus level new construction projects and repairs and alterations projects, design work will be restricted to those projects reflected in the budget justifications for this activity or other projects which have been specifically approved.

Installment acquisition payments.—Payments are made for liabilities incurred under purchase contract authority, lease purchase arrangements, and least cost financing authority. The periodic payments cover principal, interest, taxes, and other requirements. Purchase contract authority, which provided for private investment capital financing of public buildings, expired at the end of 1975.

Rental of space.—Space is acquired through the leasing of buildings including space occupied by Federal agencies in U.S. Postal Service facilities. This program will provide an estimated 100.6 million square feet in 1990 and 105.3 million square feet in 1991.

Real property operations.—Services are provided for Government-owned and leased facilities, including cleaning, utilities and fuel, protection, maintenance, and miscellaneous services (such as moving, evaluation of new materials and equipment, and field supervision). The 1991 direct program compares with the 1990 program as follows (estimated square feet and expenses in thousands):

Program direction.—Overall general management, including office automation, financial management, policy development, planning, program evaluation and administration, is funded under this activity.

Other programs.—When requested by Federal agencies, the Public Buildings Service provides building services such as tenant alterations, cleaning and other operations, and protection services which are in excess of those services provided under the commercial rental charge.

This appropriation provides for Governmentwide management of transportation and travel management; transportation audits; property management activities for utilization, rehabilitation, donation and sale of Federal property; legislative/regulatory activities; and the Schedules program. The major objective of these programs is to provide in a timely manner the goods and services needed by Federal departments and agencies, at a quality level to assure successful completion of their missions, all at least cost to the taxpayer.

The Federal Supply Service operations funded by appropriations include the Federal supply schedules contracting portion of commodity management and its related support activity. The remaining supply operations are funded by industrial funding (full cost recovery) through the General Supply Fund, as provided by Public Law 101–202.

Supply.—The purpose of this activity is to provide a Governmentwide program of contracts for commercial-type items required by Federal agencies and other authorized users of the Federal supply system. The program allows Government agencies the option of ordering standard commercial items directly from the contractor at prices which reflect the discounts associated with volume buying. This budget proposes $17,914,000 to support this program.

Transportation.—The purpose of this activity is to provide a Governmentwide program for transportation and travel management, transportation audits, and the management of aircraft procured by civilian agencies in support of their missions. This budget proposes $16,284,000 to support the transportation programs.

ernment agencies through negotiated airline city-pair contracts, Travel Management Centers (TMC), hotel/motel discounts, charge card/travelers check program, automated rate and routing processes, the small package express delivery program, audits of transportation claims by and against the U.S. Government, and the long-term vehicle lease contracts program.

Property management.—This activity manages and operates a Governmentwide personal property program including the utilization, donation, and sale of property. It encompasses most Government agencies, and provides for utilization of excess property; donation of surplus personal property for public benefit purposes; sale of surplus and exchange/sale of personal property (except DOD property); and rehabilitation and reclamation of Government personal property to extend its useful life. The budget proposes $18,045,000 in 1991 to support surplus property processed at an estimated value of $1.2 billion.

Reimbursable operations.—This activity provides supply support services to other Government agencies on a reimbursable basis, principally involving (1) the provision of technical support services to the Government of Saudi Arabia for a joint U.S./Saudi Arabian project, (2) the printing of the Federal Travel Directory through a reimbursable agreement with the Military Traffic Management Command, and (3) the provision of personal property services related to seized and forfeited property. The budget proposes a level of reimbursable services of $3,809,000 in 1991.

Public Law 99-88 provided that expenses of Transportation Audit Contracts and Contract Administration activities shall be financed from overcharges collected from carriers on transportation bills paid by the Government and other similar type refunds. Public Law 99-627 further provided prepayment audit authority for selected transportation bills, permanent authority to pay transportation audit contractors from carrier overpayments collected, and authority to transfer net overpayments collected to the Treasury. For 1991, contract audit and contract administration expenses are estimated at $15.8 million. Total collections are estimated at $61 million.

This fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, a national supply distribution system, a system of ordering supplies for direct delivery to agencies, and a system of interagency Federal Fleet Management Centers. Legislation was enacted in fiscal year 1988 to authorize full cost recovery for all supply management, operating, and overhead expenses related to providing goods and services to other agencies through the General Supply Fund. Full cost recovery pricing results in the true cost of supplies and services being reflected in charges to agencies.

Supply operations.—

Stores, regular.—Stock of common-use commodities is purchased in volume, stocked, and issued through supply facilities to Government agencies. Sales were $1,025.3 million in 1989, and are estimated to be $1,045.8 million in 1990 and $1,061.6 million in 1991.

Stores, direct delivery.—Orders for store-type items, if sufficiently large and delivery time is not a factor, are placed with the commercial source of supply for delivery directly to the customer. Sales were $63.4 million in 1989, and are estimated to be $74.7 million in 1990, and $74.7 million in 1991.

Special order.—Definite quantity requirements of commodities which are not susceptible to economical stocking in supply facilities are purchased for direct shipment to using agencies. Sales were $778.4 million in 1989, and are estimated to be $838.4 million in 1990, and $848.9 million in 1991.

Export operations.—Stores and special order items are shipped to overseas customers. Receipts to the fund cover packing, transportation costs, and other reimbursable services. Sales were $22.2 million in 1989, and are estimated to be $22.8 million in 1990 and $23.5 million in 1991.

Federal Fleet Management Centers.—Services are provided through a system of Fleet Management Centers. Sales were $446.7 million in 1989, and are estimated to be $518.6 million in 1990, and $551.8 million in 1991.

Other revenue and expense.—Gains or losses on equipment disposals, adjustments between fiscal years, inventory write-offs, and discounts are applied against operating costs.

The Information Technology Fund was authorized by the Paperwork Reduction Reauthorization Act of 1986, as included in Public Laws 99-500 and 99-591, section 821(a)(1). The Fund was established as of January 1, 1987, and consists of the assets, liabilities and capital of the Federal Telecommunications Fund and the Automatic Data Processing Fund. The purpose of the fund is to help ensure that automatic data processing, telecommunications, and other information technologies are acquired and used by the Federal Government in a manner which improves service delivery and program management, increases productivity, improves the quality of decisionmaking, reduces waste and fraud, and wherever practicable and appropriate, reduces the information processing burden for the Federal Government and for persons who provide information to and for the Federal Government.

The fund is available for expenses and for procurement for efficiently providing information technology resources to Federal agencies and for the efficient management, coordination, operation and utilization of such resources.

Levels of funding for capital investments and for operating capital are determined through the submission and approval process of planned cost and capital requirements to OMB by GSA pursuant to section 110(a)(1), Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended by Public Law 99-591.

The Information Technology Fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, the following Government-wide information resources management assistance programs:

Intercity services program.—This program provides for the Federal Telecommunications System (FTS) which enables personnel in each Federal agency to communicate directly with any other agency or commercial entity in the nation. The system provides day-to-day services and incorporates features which would be necessary in emergency situations. The current Federal Telecommunications System (FTS) links 1.1 million Federal telephones with each other and with the public's direct dialing network. Specific activities include updating services through network reconfigurations, switch upgrades, and conversion to digital facilities. The FTS system is being replaced by FTS2000. FTS2000 provides the Government with state-of-the-art switched voice service, switched data service, dedicated transmission service, packet switched service, and switched digital integrated service. Cutover from FTS to FTS2000 began in October 1989 and is scheduled to be completed in July 1990. While the transition process will result in high conversion costs of a non-recurring nature during 1990, costs will decline in 1991 as the more cost efficient FTS2000 program is fully implemented.

Local telecommunications services programs.—Included in these programs is the provision of local telecommunications services to executive agencies. Their objective is to operate consolidated telephone systems that provide effective and economical local service and, through competitive processes, procure cost advantageous telephone services and equipment. This includes the program areas of commercial tolls, Telecommunications Technical Services Contracts (TTSC) and the Purchase of Telephones and Services (POTS) contracts. Also of critical importance is the Washington Interagency Telecommunications System (WITS) that will replace a selected portion of the Federal community telephone systems in long-term leased and federally owned buildings in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area with one integrated voice and data transmission facility. In addition, the Aggregated Switch Procurement (ASP) program will consolidate systems into a single procurement action which is designed to achieve economies of scale and cost stability for systems in major metropolitan areas that are located in government-owned and long-term leased space. The ASP will replace existing systems with the latest state-of-the-art technology, as well as competed systems whose contracts have expired.

Information Security Management Program.—This program provides worldwide support to all Government activities, including GSA, conducting sensitive and classified operation in consonance with the objectives of the U.S. Communications Security Plan. To meet this responsibility, the program provides the full range of support services for communication security (COMSEC) and related systems that provide secure voice and data communications to Federal, civilian and selected Department of Defense activities.

National Security Emergency Preparedness (NSEP) Program and the NSEP Telecommunications Program.—These programs ensure that GSA supports Governmentwide national security and domestic emergency plans and that the critical logistical and telecommunications needs of the Government are available during local, national and international crises. In addition, these programs provide logistical and telecommunications support to the Federal Emergency Management Agency and other agencies in the emergency and major disaster programs.

Multiple award schedules program.—This program provides the contractual vehicle for Federal agencies to acquire services from private sector vendors participating in certain GSA multiple award schedule contracts. This program is designed to simplify and expedite the procurement process for services by allowing agencies to purchase against existing GSA multiple award schedule contracts.

Federal Data Processing Centers (FDPC).—The Centers provide GSA's Government-wide information resources assistance

programs in the areas of software, hardware, data communications, office automation, acquisition support and planning services; and in the collection and dissemination of Government-wide data. They provide technical assistance in the efficient and effective management and use of information resources and serve as sources of expertise for information resources management and technology for the Government. Additionally, they provide tools, techniques, handbooks, and assistance to facilitate the exchange of experience and knowledge throughout the Government.

Contract services program (CSP).—CSP provides ADP support services to Federal agencies through regional contracts with private sector vendors. Services provided include systems analysis and programming; systems design and definition of systems requirements and ADP facility operation services. Contracts are tailored to local market conditions and needs of Federal agencies. Overall contract administration, technical assistance, central guidance, and policy direction are provided by GSA.

Equipment lease program.—This program finances the multiyear lease of ADP equipment by the IT Fund for subsequent leaseback to Federal agencies and administers the leaseback of ADP equipment purchased by the Fund as a result of the Opportunity Buy Program.

Excess ADP equipment program.—This program finances the screening of excess Government-owned ADP equipment and, where there is a known user or high potential for reutilization, reassigns and relocates the equipment with a new user. Program policy increasing the threshold for screening excess ADP equipment to $1 million per component has significantly reduced the scope of this program; therefore, oversight responsibility was transferred to Operating Expenses, IRMS.

Capital investment.—Provides for the purchase of information technology equipment where an initial capital outlay will result in the most efficient and cost-effective operation of the Federal Telecommunications System and the least cost provision of services and facilities to Federal user agencies. It also provides for the purchase of other information technology equipment for the fund's programs when purchase yields the maximum cost avoidance and is clearly in the best economic interest of the Government. The purchase of personal computers and augmentations to existing operating equipment are funded as appropriate.

For expenses not otherwise provided for, $8,000,000 to remain available until expended, necessary for carrying out the functions of the Administrator with respect to relocation of Federal agencies from property which has been determined by the Administrator to be other than optimally utilized under the provisions of section 210(e) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended: Provided, That such relocations shall only be undertaken when the estimated proceeds from the disposition of the original facilities approximate the appraised fair market value of such new facilities and exceed the estimated costs of relocation. These funds may be used for payments to other Federal entities to accomplish the relocation functions: Provided further, That nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as relieving the Administrator of General Services or the head of any other Federal agency from any obligation or restriction under the Public Buildings Act of 1959 (including any obligation concerning submission and approval of a prospectus), the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended, or any other Federal law, or as authorizing the Administrator of General Services or the head of any other Federal agency to take actions inconsistent with statutory obligations or restrictions placed upon the Administrator of General Services or such agency head with respect to authority to acquire or dispose of real property. (Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990.)

This appropriation covers relocation costs involved in moving agencies from valuable underutilized property, targeted for public sale, to facilities determined to be more economically suitable to their needs. For 1989, approved allocations to other agencies for relocation purposes amounted to $5.9 million with an average benefit/cost ratio of 3:1. The sale of these valuable underutilized properties would provide significant revenue to the Treasury and would far outweigh the relocation costs involved.

The Consumer Information Center Fund, a revolving fund established by Public Law 98–63 on July 30, 1983, provides for an efficient operation of the Consumer Information Center's activities. Previously, these activities were funded from a direct appropriation with the cost of distributing agency publications funded by reimbursements from the participating agencies. The revolving fund assumed all of the liabilities, obligations and commitments of the Consumer Information Center account. Under the revolving fund, the Consumer Information Center's activities are financed from moneys deposited to the fund, consisting of annual appropriations from the general funds of the Treasury, reimbursements from agencies, fees collected from the public and other income incident to Consumer Information Center activities.

Administrative expenses.—The Consumer Information Center helps Federal departments and agencies release consumer information collected as a by-product of the Government's program activities. The Consumer Information Center maintains close working relationships with more than 30 Federal agencies in order to identify, develop, promote and make accessible to the public Federal consumer information. In addition, the Consumer Information Center promotes public awareness of this information through publication of the quarterly Consumer Information Catalog, and through various media services. Administrative expenses include expenditures for special projects supporting program missions. The projects are funded by fees collected from the public and by other revenue and income in the fund.

Publications distribution.—The Consumer Information Center bills agencies and in turn reimburses the Government Printing Office for the costs of distributing free publications to the public.

Central blueprinting, duplicating, and distribution services are financed by a working capital fund (40 U.S.C. 293). As authorized by the Congressional Joint Committee on Printing, GSA has established and operates 11 printing plants to meet the needs of GSA and other Government agencies. These activities are under continuous review to ensure that the

This appropriation provides for research and development activities of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The elements of the program and the work to be performed during 1991 are described below:

Space Transportation Systems Capability Development.—The principal activities include efforts related to the Spacelab, the upper stages that will place satellites in high altitude orbits not attainable by the Shuttle, the engineering and technical base support at NASA centers, payload operations and support equipment, development of the joint U.S./Italy Tethered Satellite System, building of the orbital maneuvering vehicle, and advanced programs study and evaluation efforts. Funding is included for Advanced Transportation Studies and technology for heavy lift launch vehicles required for the human exploration initiative.

Space Station.—The space station will provide permanently manned, "space-based" facilities for the Nation's science and applications programs, and for commercial exploitation of space, while exploring advanced technologies potentially useful to the economy.

Scientific Investigations in Space.—Space Science and Applications programs perform basic research to expand our knowledge of the Earth and its space environment, to explore the far reaches of the universe, and to conduct research and experiments to encourage the application of space technology to needs on Earth.

Physics and Astronomy.—Research is being conducted to investigate the environment of planets, the interplanetary medium, and distant space. Development activities will continue on the collaborative Solar Terrestrial Program and the Global Geospace Science Program with launches beginning in 1993. Development of several ongoing Explorer class satellites will be continued. Design and development activities will continue on the Advanced X-Ray Astrophysics Facility (AXAF) flight optics, mirror assembly and science instruments. Fiscal year 1991 will be the first full year of orbital operations of the Hubble Space Telescope and Gamma Ray Observatory.

Planetary Exploration.—This program encompasses the scientific exploration of the planets, comets, asteroids, and the interplanetary medium to provide increased knowledge of the origin and evolution of the solar system. Development will continue on major flight projects initiated in prior years, including Ulysses, Mars Observer and the CRAF/Cassini missions. Mission operations and data analysis support will continue for the ongoing Voyager and Pioneer missions as well as for Magellan, and the Galileo Mission to Jupiter, which were launched in 1989. Emphasis will be placed on Mars and Lunar related activities in support of the human exploration initiative.

Life Sciences.—This program provides for the research and technology required to meet the goals of ensuring human health, safety, and productivity in space. In 1991, emphasis will be placed on research on the effects of long-term exposure to weightlessness and development of flight experiments for use on the Space Shuttle, the Space Station, and ultimately for human exploration.

Space and Terrestrial Applications:

Space Applications.—Space applications programs are concerned with observations of the Earth and its environment, materials processing, space communications and information systems. Major activities in 1991 include research to better understand mechanisms that affect Earth processes, continued development of Space Shuttle and Space Station payloads, and ground-based research in areas well suited to take advantage of microgravity conditions.

Funding is included for the initiation of Mission to Planet Earth, NASA's contribution to the U.S. Global Change Research Program. Mission to Planet Earth includes the Earth Observing System, Earth Probes, and ongoing precursor satellite missions. These programs will contribute to the interagency research, data collection, and modeling activities focused on improving the scientific basis for making sound environmental, energy, agricultural, and economic policy decisions related to global change issues. The U.S. Global Change Research Program will be highlighted in a separate document accompanying the President's 1991 Budget.

Development activities will continue on the Ocean Topography Experiment (TOPEX), the Upper Atmospheric Research Satellite (UARS), Scatterometer, and the Advanced Communications Technology Satellite (ACTS).

Commercial Programs.—These programs pursue the involvement of the commercial sector in NASA's space activities through the Technology Utilization and Commercial Use of Space programs.

Space Research and Technology.—In 1991, work directed toward providing the technology underlying the conduct of future space missions will continue. Advancement of technological capabilities will proceed to implement the President's goal of expanding human presence in space by developing the key technologies needed for the human exploration initiative.

Exploration Mission Studies.—The major emphasis in 1991 will be to continue a series of mission studies, technology trades and science opportunity requirements needed for the human exploration initiative.

Transatmospheric Research and Technology.—A joint NASA/DOD program will explore new approaches for cost-effective hypersonic flight in the atmosphere with the capability to accelerate to orbit. The program will pursue research and advanced technology development leading to a transatmospheric flight research vehicle in the 1990's.

Aeronautical Research and Technology.—This program conducts research and develops technology for future U.S. military and civil aircraft.

Major thrusts of 1991 activities include: continuing advancement in both basic aeronautical disciplines and systems research; maintaining and operating specialized facilities essential to aeronautical research; and pursuing technological advances in critical areas of high risk and potentially high payoff to the Nation. Systems technology efforts will emphasize areas including materials and structures, which will be augmented in advanced composite materials, high-performance aircraft, advanced propulsion systems, and numerical aerodynamic simulation.

Safety, Reliability, and Quality Assurance.—This activity will continue to enhance the safety and technical execution of NASA programs agency-wide.

Academic Programs.—This activity funds agency-wide academic programs. FY 1991 funding will support graduate student fellowships, faculty fellowships, the historically black colleges and university research program, elementary and secondary school programs, and the Space Grant College and Fellowship Program, established in the FY 1988 NASA Authorization Act (Public Law 100-147).

Supporting Activity: Tracking and Data Advanced Systems.—This program provides advanced studies to ensure capability for tracking, data acquisition, communications, and data processing support required by all NASA flight projects in accomplishing their mission objectives. Research and development activities will provide tracking and data acquisition support systems for future flight programs.

This appropriation provides for production and operational activities for the Space Transportation System; and for tracking, telemetry, command, and data acquisition support of all NASA flight projects. The elements of the program and the work to be performed during 1991 are described below.

Space Transportation Systems:

Shuttle production and capability development.—In 1991, the principal activities are focused on providing necessary capabilities to continue the safe buildup of the Shuttle flight rate. Work on the replacement orbiter will be completed, with delivery scheduled for 1991. Design and development activities will continue in 1991 to complete those activities associated with the redesigned solid rocket motor, and to develop the Advanced Solid Rocket Motor (ASRM). Development of the hardware necessary to extend the on-orbit stay time of the Space Shuttle Columbia to 14–16 days will be continued.

Operations.—This activity provides the standard operational services for the Space Shuttle and procurement of expendable launch vehicle services to satisfy the launch requirements of scientific and operational payloads. Nine Shuttle flights are planned for 1990 and ten missions are planned for 1991, leading to a capability of 14 flights per year by 1996. Implementation of NASA's mixed fleet plan will be continued and expanded with support provided for additional procurements of expendable launch vehicle services on a commercial competitive basis where available for specified missions requiring small, medium and large launch systems.

Supporting Activity: Tracking and Data Acquisition.—This program, using ground-based and satellite (tracking and data relay satellite system) components, provides vital tracking, telemetry, command, and data acquisition support to meet the requirements of all NASA flight projects, as well as on a reimbursable basis for projects of the Department of Defense and other Government agencies, commercial firms, and other countries and international organizations engaged in space research endeavors.

Payment of Government share of retirement costs.—The Civil Service Retirement Amendments of 1969 provide for financing of the current year's costs of the unfunded liability created since its enactment on October 20, 1969. Any statute which authorizes (1) new or liberalized benefits, (2) extension of retirement coverage, or (3) pay increases, is deemed to authorize appropriations to the fund to finance the unfunded liability created.

Transfers for interest on unfunded liability and payment of military service annuities.—The Secretary of the Treasury is required to make annual payments from general revenues into the Retirement fund of an amount equivalent to: (1) interest on the unfunded liability, and (2) annuity disbursements attributable to military service. The Office of Personnel Management, at the end of each year, notifies the Secretary of the Treasury of the amount of payment to be made to the Retirement fund and reports such sums to the President and Congress.

Payments for spouse equity.—The Civil Service Retirement Spouse Equity Act of 1985, Public Law 98-615, provides for the payment of survivor annuities to eligible former spouses of annuitants who died between September 1978 and May 1986 and who did not elect survivor coverage. The law authorizes the Office of Personnel Management to notify the Secretary of the Treasury of the amount of such annuities paid each fiscal year and directs the Secretary to credit this amount to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund.

Transfers for payment of FERS supplemental liability.—Under provisions of the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS) Act of 1986, Public Law 99-335, the Secretary of Treasury is required to make annual amortization payments to finance supplemental liabilities as calculated for the new FERS.

To the extent that OPM is required to pay a fee to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for name and fingerprint checks, agencies will be required to reimburse OPM for such fees through the revolving fund.

Fees collected by the President's Commission on Executive Exchange are also credited to the revolving fund and are available for the Commission's use.

This fund is used to pay annuities to retired employees or their survivors; to make refunds to former employees for amounts withheld and to beneficiaries of employees who died before retirement or before the annuities equaled the amount withheld; and, to pay administrative expenses of the Office of Personnel Management and the Merit Systems Protection Board in administering the program. On June 6, 1986, the President signed the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986, Public Law 99-335, which established the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS). FERS is a three-tiered pension program designed along the lines of the best private sector plans. Using Social Security as a base, it provides an additional Basic Benefit based upon the length of Federal service (generally one percent of average salary per year) as well as a savings plan. The basic benefit element of this new plan was effective January 1, 1987, and is included within the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund. Generally, the Plan covers all employees hired after December 31, 1983, and former CSRS-covered employees who elected to join FERS. Pertinent statistics as of the end of the year are shown below:

This schedule reflects the effect of proposals to (1) eliminate the January 1991 cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) for all annuitants except permanent disability annuitants; (2) effect, beginning in 1992, a modified COLA for all annuitants whereby Consumer Price Index (CPI) increases up to 2 percent would be fully matched, those between 2 and 3 percent would result in a 2 percent COLA and those at 3 percent or more would result in a COLA equalling the change in CPI minus 1 percent; (3) eliminate the alternative annuity provision of the current law which allows for the election of a lump-sum payment of employee contributions and (4) increase Postal Service and D.C. Government employer contributions to cover the additional cost of COLA's granted to Postal and D.C. Government annuitants.

The fund provides for the cost of health benefits for: (1) active employees; (2) employees who retired after June 1960, or their survivors; (3) those annuitants transferred from the Retired Federal employees health benefits program as authorized by Public Law 93-246; and (4) the related expenses of the Office of Personnel Management in administering the program. The significant outlay reductions in 1989 are associated with the letter of credit arrangement for premium payments to certain experienced-rated carriers implemented during FY 1989.

Budget program.—The balance of the fund is available for payments without fiscal year limitation. Numbers of participants at the end of each fiscal year are as follows:

Active employees	2,455,000	2,455,000	2,455,000
Annuitants	1,595,000	1,635,000	1,675,000
Total	4,050,000	4,090,000	4,130,000

In determining a biweekly subscription rate to cover program costs, one percent is added for administrative expense, and three percent is added for a contingency reserve held by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) for each carrier. The OPM is authorized to transfer unused administrative reserve funds to the contingency reserve.

As provided by Public Law 101-76, the method for deriving the maximum government contribution was modified because of the withdrawal of the Aetna-sponsored indemnity plan. As in past years, the government contribution remains at 60 percent of the revised base for general schedule employees and 75 percent for Postal Service employees.

Operating results.—Funds advanced to carriers but not used to pay claims in the current period are carried forward as special reserves for use in subsequent periods.

The Office of Personnel Management maintains a contingency reserve, funded by employee and Government contributions, that may be used to defray future cost increases or provide increased benefits. OPM makes payments to carriers from this reserve whenever carrier-held reserves fall below levels prescribed by OPM regulations.

[1] Excludes amount of accidental death and dismemberment insurance.

Financing.—For non-Postal Service employees, premium costs for the regular program are met by withholding 18 cents biweekly from the salaries of employees for each $1 thousand of life insurance and a 50 percent matching contribution by employer-agencies. The optional program is financed by withholding from employees' salaries or retirees' annuities. The beneficial association program is financed by direct collection from members. Most of the difference between receipt and benefit payments under the policy is held in reserve for paying future life insurance claims. The status of reserves at the end of the year is as follows (in millions of dollars):

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Held in reserve:
Contingency reserve	50	50	50
Beneficial association program reserve	1	1	1
U.S. Treasury reserve	9,681	10,605	11,553
Total reserves	9,732	10,656	11,604

The contingency reserve for the basic program was reduced to $50 million as of June 30, 1976, and it is expected to remain at this level. Excess income from the program over benefit payments and other expenses is deposited in the U.S. Treasury to the credit of the Employees life insurance fund. The operations of the insurer for the regular and optional life insurance program is as follows (in millions of dollars):

The Small Business Administration (SBA) provides assistance to small businesses and to victims of physical disasters. These efforts are conducted through the following activities:

Finance and Investment.—The salaries and related administrative expenses for all SBA financial assistance activities are provided through this appropriation account. Funds for the Agency's guaranteed loan and investment programs are financed through the business loan and investment fund. All guaranteed business financing programs are proposed for consolidation into four programs: General Business Assistance, Development Company Assistance, Minority Investment Company Assistance, and Investment Company Assistance. Direct lending will be continued to participants in the Section 8(a) minority business program. In addition, the budget proposes the increase of guarantee fees to make SBA's programs more self-sufficient and to improve the quality of SBA credit. Guarantee fee increases will be lower for the Minority Investment Company financing to provide an additional subsidy.

The disaster assistance program administered by this activity and financed through the Disaster Loan Fund is proposed to be reformed by providing assistance only to individuals unable to obtain credit from private lenders. In addition, subsidies will be reduced by increasing the interest rate on disaster loans to the Treasury's cost of borrowing.

Procurement Assistance.—The programs under this activity are aimed at assuring that small business receives a fair share of Government procurements. In addition, SBA maintains a Procurement Automated Source System, which is used by Federal agencies and prime contractors to identify small businesses for contract opportunities.

Minority Small Business and Capital Ownership Development.—This activity provides assistance to minority small business concerns—primarily in the area of Federal procurement—and evaluates overall Agency performance in promoting minority business development. The business development program assists in the establishment or expansion of firms that are owned by minority or other disadvantaged business persons and that have the potential to develop into viable competitive businesses in a reasonable period of time. The budget includes additional staff in 1990 and 1991 to carry out program reforms enacted in the Business Opportunity Development Reform Act of 1988.

Special Programs.—The Associate Deputy Administrator for this function exercises direction over Business Development, Veterans' Affairs, Women's Business Ownership, Private Sector Initiatives, International Trade, Small Business Development Centers (SBDCs), and the National Advisory Council. These offices are responsible for effective management and operational efficiency in assuring that specialized attention and proper emphasis to the emergent needs of the small business community are represented. In addition, in 1990 and 1991, the Office of Women's Business Ownership will increase its outreach and promotional activities, including demonstration projects authorized by the Women's Business Ownership Act. The budget proposes phasing out Federal contributions to the Small Business Development Center (SBDC) program. The budget also proposes reasonable increases in user fees beginning in 1991 for the Business Development program to help offset increased costs associated with a planned increase in dissemination of publications.

Advocacy.—This office is responsible for the development and implementation of a Small Business Administration Advocacy program, including the representation of small business interests, the analysis of the effects of federal laws, regulation and activity on small business, the development and utilization of a small business data base to aid in this analysis and liaison with small business and small business organizations and the public.

General Business Assistance.—The Small Business Administration (SBA) guarantees loans to small businesses that are unable to obtain private financing. These loans must be of such value or so secured as to reasonably assure repayment. No loan may be made unless the financial assistance is not otherwise available on reasonable terms. Under the guarantee plan, the SBA agrees to purchase the guaranteed portion of the loan only upon default. SBA's share of loans guaranteed by private lenders is about 81 percent. In addition to providing financial assistance to the general business community, particular emphasis is given to the following groups:

Businesses owned by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals;

Businesses that employ or are owned by handicapped individuals;

Small business concerns located in urban or rural areas with high proportions of unemployed or low-income individuals or owned by low-income individuals; and

Small business concerns owned and operated by veterans, especially Vietnam-era veterans.

Investment Company Assistance.—A primary function of small business investment companies is to provide a source of equity capital or long-term loans to new or expanding small businesses. The Small Business Investment Act, as amended, authorizes the SBA to purchase or to guarantee the timely payment of all principal and interest, as scheduled, on debentures issued by such companies. The 1991 request proposes to convert direct lending to guaranteed lending. Substantial additional guarantee authority is requested under the Minority Investment Company Program. In addition, beginning in 1990, SBA will provide an interest subsidy to provide additional assistance to Minority Investment Companies.

Development Company Assistance.—Under the Small Business Investment Act, the SBA makes loans through State and local development companies to small businesses. Through these programs, the SBA promotes economic development and job creation or maintenance by stimulating the flow of long-term financing to small business concerns for projects that involve fixed assets. These projects are designed to create or retain a meaningful number of jobs in the communities affected, with a special emphasis on distressed areas.

FY 1991 Proposal.—This request proposes the conversion of all SBA direct lending to guaranteed lending, except for direct loans to minority firms participating in the Section 8(a) program. Direct loans are continued to provide an additional subsidy to these businesses. In addition, the budget proposes the establishment of only four types of guaranteed lending: (1) General Business Assistance, (2) Development Company Assistance, (3) Minority Investment Company Assistance, and (4) Investment Company Assistance. The program will, however, still emphasize lending to businesses owned by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals and other borrowers requiring special emphasis.

This request also proposes increasing guarantee fees to help offset losses SBA incurs in these programs. To provide an additional credit subsidy to minority small businesses, the budget proposes a lower increase in the guarantee fee for Minority Investment Companies. Increased fees, together with improved credit management and debt collection policies, will help reduce the cost of these programs and contribute towards eventual self-sufficiency.

Activities conducted under the Pollution Control Equipment Contract Guarantee Revolving Fund are proposed to be consolidated into this account. Since no new activity is projected for that account other than liquidating existing obligations, the consolidation would simplify SBA's accounting requirements and improve its internal controls.

In addition, this schedule reflects the increased receipts to this account from proposed guarantee fee increases.

This fund finances disaster loans made pursuant to section 7(b) of the Small Business Act, as amended.

Physical Disaster Loans.—Under this program, loans are made to individuals and businesses at favorable terms and conditions for uninsured losses of property, both real and personal, damaged by natural disasters such as tornadoes, floods, hurricanes, etc. The large outlays in 1990 reflect assistance provided to victims of Hurricane Hugo and the Loma Prieta earthquake.

The budget proposes that starting in fiscal year 1991, the SBA will no longer make loans to individuals able to obtain loans from private lenders. In addition, to reduce the deep subsidy in this program, the interest rate is proposed to be increased to the Treasury cost of borrowing.

Under this program, the Small Business Administration guarantees a portion of the losses sustained by a surety company as a result of the issuance of a bid, payment, and/or performance bond to a small business concern.

In 1991, the budget proposes an increased program level to accommodate expected increases in demand from small and minority contractors seeking bonds, and from the new preferred surety bond program authorized in P.L. 100-590.

Public Law 94–305, approved June 4, 1976, established this fund to alleviate the adverse impact of pollution regulations on small businesses. The Small Business Administration may, whenever it determines that small business concerns are to be at an operational or financial disadvantage with respect to planning, design, or installation of pollution control facilities or the financing thereof, guarantee the payment of rentals or other amounts due under qualified contracts. As a result of the elimination of tax exempt financing associated with the Pollution Control Guaranteed program, the level of activity has decreased significantly.

In 1989, new financings for this program are authorized under the Business Loan and Investment Fund. Therefore, this budget is also proposing to consolidate this fund into the Business Loan and Investment Fund.

Volunteers in Service to America.—In 1991, the VISTA program will provide 3,000 volunteer service years to assist communities working to resolve local poverty-related problems in areas such as illiteracy, hunger, unemployment, substance abuse, and homelessness. The Literacy Corps will provide an additional 335 VISTA volunteer service years to develop, strengthen, supplement, and expand the efforts of public and private non-profit organizations at the local, State, and Federal levels to overcome the problems of illiteracy. The Student Community Service Programs assist secondary and post-secondary educational institutions and vocational schools to establish and maintain student volunteer activities for low-income communities.

Special volunteer programs.—These programs stimulate and encourage the innovative use of volunteer services and provide community groups with small grants for project development. In 1991, these grants will be used solely for drug abuse prevention activities. They will aid in the expansion of public-private partnerships, coalition-building efforts, and mentoring projects that focus on at-risk youth.

Older American volunteer programs.—These programs provide opportunities for people aged 60 and over to volunteer their services to the community in many socially useful activities and by working with the emotionally disturbed, the mentally retarded, and physically disabled, as well as the isolated and infirm elderly. In 1991, approximately 27,300 Foster Grandparent volunteers will serve about 73,400 children. Emphasis will be on "at-risk" children, drug abuse prevention, and literacy. The Retired Senior Volunteer program will support about 404,900 part-time volunteers providing service in areas such as literacy, drug abuse prevention, health, nutrition, education, and crime prevention, plus addressing the problems of "at-risk" persons and refugees. Approximately 12,700 volunteers in the Senior Companion program will provide long-term care services such as companionship, respite care, and household management assistance to about 34,000 frail and elderly Americans.

Office of the Inspector General.—The Office of the Inspector General provides an independent assessment of agency operations, primarily through audits and investigations, with the goal of preventing fraud, waste, and abuse.

Program support.—Costs of program direction and administration are financed by this activity.

The Conference assists the President, the Congress, and the Federal departments and agencies in improving administrative procedure. It conducts studies of the efficiency, adequacy, and fairness of the procedures that the agencies and departments use to determine the rights, privileges, and obligations of private persons. The Conference issues formal recommendations for improvements and then encourages their implementation.

In addition to its research activities, the Conference also arranges for the interchange among administrative agencies of information useful in improving administrative procedure and, on an ongoing basis, furnishes assistance and advice on matters of administrative procedure to the agencies, Congress, and others.

The Conference receives funds from other Federal agencies for special projects carried out by the Conference pursuant to agreements with these agencies.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations (ACIR) is a 26-member independent, bipartisan body. The Commission and its staff examine Federal, State and local trends, events, and programs that affect intergovernmental relations. On request, proposed legislation and executive actions are reviewed to determine their overall effect on the Federal system. The Commission also identifies emerging problems of Federal-State-local relations and assists States and localities in anticipating and meeting problems caused by various intergovernmental overlaps and conflicts, and makes recommendations concerning the workings and structural arrangements of governmental units and allocation of responsibilities and revenues among the various levels of government. The recommendations and published reports growing out of the Commission's work are submitted to the executive and legislative branches of Federal, State, and local governments for appropriate action.

Continuing and annual projects of the Commission include assessing changing public attitudes on government and taxes; publishing annual data on the "representative tax system" for all 50 States; analyzing fiscal disparities; publishing a periodic catalog of Federal aid; surveying and identifying trends in State and local finances; monitoring key intergovernmental legislation of Federal, State, and local governments; and providing educational and technical assistance to Federal, State, and local governments regarding Commission recommendations.

Nonrecurring projects completed or nearing completion include studies of State constitutional law in the Federal system, Federal preemption of State authority, criteria and mechanisms for Federal mandate reimbursements, local governance and service provision in fragmented metropolitan areas, residential community associations, intergovernmental aspects of public welfare, balance in the Federal system, interjurisdictional tax and policy competition, State regulation of banks, local revenue diversification, and State groundwater management.

Other nonrecurring research projects underway or being initiated include State and local international trade and investment programs, State taxation and regulation of telecommunications, and State taxation of interstate banking.

Appropriations finance the personnel and personnel-related expenses incurred in the basic day-to-day operation of the Commission.

The American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA) was created by Public Law 93-179 to "provide for the preparation, distribution, dissemination, exhibition, and sale of commemorative medals and other historical, commemorative, and informational materials and objects which will contribute to public information, awareness, and interest in the bicentennial".

The Secretary of the Interior, as ARBA's legal successor, delegated to the Director of the Office of Hearings and Appeals of the Department of the Interior the responsibility to determine a reasonable settlement of claims by participants in the bicentennial commemorative licensing program administered by ARBA. On June 10, 1988, the Office of Hearings and Appeals issued a decision announcing a negotiated settlement with eligible claimants. These awards represent a final and binding extinguishment of any and all claims by licensees against ARBA and its successors.

This appropriation establishes a framework of joint Federal and State efforts to provide basic facilities essential to economic growth in Appalachia. Program investments made in the Appalachian Region are concentrated in areas with significant potential for future growth as well as in those areas that suffer the greatest distress. The States, acting through the Appalachian Regional Commission, are responsible for recommending local and State projects within their borders for assistance under this program.

1. Appalachian Development Highway System.—The Appalachian Development Highway System including local access roads, is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia; to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia; and to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia. The budget for 1991 provides $30 million for highway construction.

The cumulative status of the system of roads, including mileage prefinanced by the States, follows:

Development systems miles (Prefinanced miles included) (cumulative):
Miles contracted	2,096	2,120	2,130

Projects are generally related to creation of jobs. However, special consideration and criteria are used to assist the Region's ninety most distressed counties in providing basic services to their residents. The budget for 1991 provides $6.3 million with the approximate approved project workload as follows:

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Community development	198	112	42

3. Human Development Program.—A funding level of $6.2 million for 1991 will sustain the Commission's efforts to tackle some of the Region's most intractable problems, through programs in rural education with emphases upon customized job training, dropout prevention and workforce literacy and in rural health with emphases upon infant mortality reduction and employer-related child care. Approximate approved project workload follows:

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Human development	80	60	60

4. Research and Local Development District Programs.—Planning assistance is provided through grants to multicounty local development districts and for technical assistance and research projects. The budget for 1991 provides $4.2 million with the approximate approved workload as follows:

The Federal Government contributes 50 percent of the expenses of a professional staff which works with the States and the Federal staff in operating the program. These staff are not Federal employees but are employees of the jointly supported Commission. The budget for 1991 provides $3.3 million for salaries and expenses. Increases are for personnel costs for the same number of positions as 1990.

The Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board was established by section 502 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 to ensure compliance with the Architectural Barriers Act of 1968. Its primary role is to carry out a compliance program to ensure accessibility and usability of most Federal and federally-funded buildings by people with disabilities. In 1990, the Board will continue to process, investigate, and resolve complaints of noncompliance. In 1989, 176 complaints were received. Emphasis is on voluntary, amicable resolution of access issues.

The Board also develops Federal minimum accessibility guidelines and requirements for the standards under the Architectural Barriers Act, and provides technical assistance to public and private organizations affected by Federal accessibility regulations.

The Commission engages in studies concerning areas in which there may be denials of civil rights and reports on these matters to the President and the Congress. Hearings by the Commissioners are held to investigate and obtain information about denials of civil rights. Conferences and open meetings are held by staff and State Advisory Committees to gather data and issue reports providing information about civil rights problems. In addition, appraisals of Federal agencies' civil rights programs are made and complaints alleging discrimination are referred to the proper Federal agencies.

The Commission provides liaison with private groups, public groups, and the media to provide civil rights information to Government officials, organizations, and the public. This is sometimes accomplished through the issuance of Commission publications. It also provides a library resource to support civil rights research, studies, hearings, and other Commission activities, and makes this information available to the general public.

The Committee for Purchase From the Blind and Other Severely Handicapped was established by the Wagner-O'Day Act of 1938, as amended. Its primary objective is to provide employment opportunities for the blind and other severely handicapped and, whenever possible, to prepare them to engage in competitive employment. In 1991, 18,500 blind and handicapped individuals are projected to be employed in 445 producing workshops. The Committee's duties include promoting the program, determining which commodities and services are suitable for Government procurement from qualified nonprofit agencies serving the blind and other severely handicapped; publishing a procurement list of such commodities and services; determining the fair market price for commodities and services on the procurement list; and making rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the Act. The Committee expects to have 2,650 items on its procurement list, and workshop sales of $430 million.

The Committee staff's responsibilities include promoting and assessing the overall program; supervising the selection and assignment of new commodities and services; assisting in establishing prices; reviewing and adjusting these prices; verifying the qualifications of workshops; and monitoring their performance.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) administers the Commodity Exchange Act of 1936, as amended. The purpose of the CFTC is to further the economic utility of the futures markets by encouraging their efficiency, assuring their integrity, and protecting participants against abusive trade practices, fraud, and deceit. The object of commodity futures trading regulation is to enable the markets to better serve their designated functions of providing a price discovery mechanism and a means of offsetting price risk. By properly serving these functions, the futures markets serve the public interest by contributing toward better planning, more efficient distribution and consumption, and more economical marketing. The budget provides a 21 percent increase in the CFTC appropriation in order to provide increased oversight of futures makets. Legislation will be proposed to establish a transaction fee on CFTC-regulated futures and options contracts to cover the cost of CFTC activities. The proposed fee would generate $41,433,000 in 1991 and would be deposited as governmental receipt to the general fund of the Treasury.

Market surveillance, analysis and research.—Responsibilities under this program include daily surveillance of the market activity of large individual traders and fundamental economic market factors to insure orderly markets. Contract terms and conditions are reviewed to insure conformity with current cash marketing conditions and adequate deliverable supplies. This program also systematically investigates the functioning of markets and market users and develops better tools to assist in detecting and preventing price distortions.

Under current authorizing legislation, which expires in 1993, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting has three major activities: (1) direct payments to public television and radio stations to be used at their discretion for purposes related primarily to program production or acquisition; (2) support for the production and acquisition of radio and television programs for national distribution; and (3) support for replacement of public broadcasting's satellite capability. In addition, the Corporation assists in the financing of several system-wide activities, including national satellite interconnection services and the payment of music royalty fees, and provides limited technical assistance, research, and planning services to improve system-wide capacity and performance. The appropriation for the Corporation is enacted two years in advance. For 1991, an appropriation of $299 million was enacted in 1989.

The Administration is requesting $260 million for general programming and system support, and $47 million to conclude the Federal contribution to the replacement of public broadcasting's satellite capacity. Public broadcasting plays a vital role in the educational and cultural development of our Nation. The proposed funding level will allow the Corporation to maintain and improve quality public service programming and to meet the needs of American public telecommunications. The table below illustrates the 1990–1993 funding levels for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting:

Note.—For 1991, $32.8 million for payment to the District of Columbia for water and sewer services furnished to facilities of the United States Government will be financed on a reimbursable basis by the agencies receiving these services. The agencies will transfer the amounts from their separate appropriations and other funds available for this purpose.

The Federal payment of $430.5 million is to reimburse the government of the District of Columbia for the net cost of the Federal presence. Legislation will be proposed to amend the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act of 1973 (Public Law 93-198), as amended, to authorize $430.5 million as the 1991 payment by the United States. The 1991 budget proposes legislation to make permanent the 1990 pilot project for directly charging Federal establishments for water and sewer services provided. The budget also proposes to implement a few modifications thereby enabling the District Government to bill Federal establishments directly for these services. This appropriation also includes a contribution of $52.1 million which represents the Federal share of payments to District of Columbia retirement funds for police officers, fire fighters, teachers and judges and a payment of $10.0 million to assist in financing St. Elizabeths Hospital as part of a six-year plan to transfer administrative and financial responsibility from the Federal Government to the District. In addition, this appropriation contains $26.7 million in funds to remain available until expended to assist the District in fighting drug-related crime.

The purpose of the Export-Import Bank (Eximbank) is to aid in financing and promoting U.S. exports. To accomplish its objectives, the Bank's authority and resources are used to: assume commercial and political risks that exporters or private institutions are unwilling or unable to undertake; overcome maturity and other limitations in private sector export financing; assist U.S. exporters to meet foreign officially sponsored export credit competition; and provide leadership and guidance in export financing to the U.S. exporting and banking communities and to foreign borrowers. The Bank is also actively assisting small- and medium-sized businesses to increase their exports by publicizing the Bank's programs.

Eximbank also provides export credit insurance through the Foreign Credit Insurance Association (FCIA) to U.S. exporters and financial institutions to protect them against the risk of default by foreign buyers as a result of certain commercial and political events. FCIA is a private unincorporated association of insurance companies that shared risks with Eximbank until October 1983 when the private insurance companies withdrew from participation in FCIA. Beginning in 1989, private companies began to assume certain risks in selected policies, but Eximbank still bears most of the risks of default and financial net losses associated with the program. FCIA continues to administer the insurance policies. The revenues and expenses associated with FCIA activities are explicitly shown in the Eximbank budget schedules.

A limitation of $500 million for direct loans and of $10.599 billion for guarantees and FCIA insurance is proposed for 1991.

Operating results and financial condition.—The Bank is a wholly owned Government corporation. Capital stock of $1 billion was purchased by the U.S. Treasury. In addition, the Bank is authorized to borrow from the Treasury up to $6 billion. The Bank pays interest on such borrowings.

Beginning in FY 1989, the Bank has established a Reserve for Possible Credit Losses. The Reserve for Possible Credit Losses provides for the risk of loss inherent in the lending process. This reserve is a general reserve, available to absorb credit losses related to the total loan portfolio. The reserve is increased by provisions charged to expenses and decreased by charge-offs, net of recoveries.

The Provision for Possible Credit Losses is based on the Bank's evaluation of the adequacy of the Reserve taking into consideration a variety of factors, including repayment status of loans, future risk factors, the relationship of the Reserve to the portfolio, and worldwide economic conditions. Providing for such possible losses does not imply that any loans will be written off. It simply recognizes the fact that the prospects of collection of some of the Bank's loans are sufficiently far into the future that the value of these loans are impaired. It does not provide for losses on a country-by-country basis and is intended only to provide an overall revaluation of the loan portfolio.

The Bank's net operating loss is estimated to be $223 million in 1991, compared with a loss of $244 million in 1990 and an operating loss of $4,879 million in 1989. Total Government equity in the corporation is estimated to be negative $4,465 million on September 30, 1991.

LIMITATION ON REVOLVING FUND FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES—Continued

The Farm Credit Administration (FCA) is an independent Federal agency that examines and regulates the Farm Credit System. The Farm Credit System is a cooperative agricultural credit system of farm credit banks and associations that lends to farmers, ranchers, and their cooperatives. Beginning in 1990, the FCA also performs annual audits of the Federal Agriculture Mortgage Corporation.

The Farm Credit System is comprised of 11 Farm Credit Banks, the National Bank for Cooperatives, 2 regional banks for cooperatives, and approximately 266 associations and other institutions and service corporations.

Assessments based upon estimated administrative expenses are collected from institutions in the Farm Credit System and the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation and are available for administrative expenses. Obligations are incurred within congressionally set limitations on administrative expenses.

The Revolving Fund was capitalized by the repurchase by Farm Credit System banks of their stock held by the Government. The Farm Credit Amendments Act of 1985 merged the Banks for Cooperatives fund and the short-term credit investment fund, and made this fund available to the Farm Credit Administration. The Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, as amended, authorized the transfer in January 1989 of unobligated funds from the Revolving Fund to the Farm Credit Insurance Corporation. The Insurance Corporation is an independent Federal agency that ensures timely payment of principal and interest on Farm Credit System obligations.

The Assistance Board was created by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 and was Federally chartered in January 1988. Its members consist of the Secretaries of the Treasury and Agriculture, and one other member appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate. The purposes of the Assistance Board are to carry out a program to provide assistance to Farm Credit System institutions, protect the stock of borrowers, and assist System institutions to continue to provide credit at reasonable and competitive terms. When authorized by the Assistance Board, a System institution issues preferred stock which is purchased by the Farm Credit System Financial Assistance Corporation.

The Assistance Board is also empowered to approve business operating and investment plans and impose other terms and conditions in connection with authorized assistance. The Board is not subject to regulation by the Farm Credit Administration. Its authority will end December 31, 1992. Administrative costs of the Board are paid by the Farm Credit System Financial Assistance Corporation.

The Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation was established to ensure the timely payment of principal and interest on Farm Credit System obligations. Its Board of Directors is the Farm Credit Administration Board. The Insurance Corporation began operation in January 1989, at which time amounts currently in the on-budget Farm Credit revolving fund were transferred to it. Beginning in January 1990, the Insurance Corporation will collect insurance premiums charged to insured System banks, which amounts will be based on the level of accruing and non-accruing loans in each bank's loan portfolio. Public Law 101-220 reduced insurance premiums charged on Federal- and State-guaranteed loans originated by Farm Credit System institutions. Annual premium collections will continue until the reserve fund equals 2 percent of outstanding System obligations, or an amount determined by its Board of Directors to be sufficient based on the System's loan risk.

Beginning in January 1993, the Insurance Corporation fund will become available for payment on System obligations if an insured System bank defaults on its primary liability. Also at that time the Insurance Corporation can exercise its authority to make loans, purchase System bank assets or securities, and otherwise act to reduce the exposure of the Corporation to losses. The Insurance Fund also is available to pay principal and interest on debt issued by the Farm Credit System Financial Assistance Corporation upon payment default by System institutions after amounts in the Financial Assistance Corporation Trust Fund are exhausted.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was created by the Banking Act of 1933 to provide protection for bank depositors and to foster sound banking practices. The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 enhanced the authorities and responsibilities of the Corporation. The Act established three funds: the Bank Insurance Fund (BIF) to insure banks, the Savings Association Insurance Fund (SAIF) to insure thrifts, and the FSLIC Resolution Fund (FRF). All three funds are administered by the Corporation.

The deposit insurance ceiling protection has been $100,000 since March 31, 1980. In order to accomplish its varied functions in the protection of depositors, the Corporation is authorized to promulgate and enforce rules and regulations relating to the supervision of insured institutions and to perform other regulatory and supervisory duties consistent with its responsibilities as insurer.

In order to facilitate deposit assumptions and mergers, or to assist operating institutions, the Corporation is authorized to make loans to the assuming or acquiring institution, or in the case of direct assistance, to the operating institution. The schedules reflect the outstanding principal amounts of these loans, projected repayments, and estimated additional disbursements and repayments during 1990 and 1991.

The Corporation is required to set assessment rates for insured institutions annually to build up the reserves of both SAIF and BIF funds until they equal a minimum of 1.25 percent of total insured deposits, or if deemed necessary by the Corporation, up to 1.50 percent.

The Act increased the Corporation's existing line of credit at the Treasury from $3 billion to $5 billion, which can be used for either the BIF or the SAIF. Any borrowing becomes a liability of the insurance fund on behalf of which the borrowing is conducted.

The Act dissolved the Permanent Insurance Fund, a trust revolving fund, replacing it with the BIF, a public enterprise revolving fund. All assets and liabilities of the Permanent Insurance Fund were transferred to the BIF. Depository institutions insured by the Permanent Insurance Fund are now insured by the BIF. Estimated data for the Permanent Insurance Fund and the BIF are presented separately for 1989. Budgetary data of both funds must be added to obtain the appropriate level of expenditures for insured banks in 1989.

BIF income is derived principally from insurance assessments paid by insured banks and interest on investment in U.S. Government securities. As of September 30, 1989, the deposit insurance fund amounted to $14.3 billion. The entire fund represents the accumulated net income of the BIF and is reserved for the protection of depositors in insured banks and for payment of administrative and insurance expenses.

The estimates for 1990 and 1991 in these statements make provision for losses and expenses which might occur by the closing of any bank after September 30, 1989.

The Savings Association Insurance Fund insures depository institutions formerly insured by the FSLIC. The FSLIC Resolution Fund will pay SAIF's administrative and examination expenses through 1991. Starting in 1992, SAIF will receive assessments paid by its members.

The Act requires Treasury to make payments to the SAIF to cover deposit premium shortfalls. The Act also authorizes Treasury to make payments to maintain SAIF's net worth at specified minimum levels. The SAIF is not expected to incur case resolution expenses before August 1992, when the Resolution Trust Corporation ceases to assume responsibility for new thrift insolvencies.

FSLIC RESOLUTION FUND

For payment of expenditures, in fiscal year [1990] 1991, of the FSLIC Resolution Fund, for which other funds available to the FSLIC Resolution Fund as authorized by Public Law 101-73 are insufficient, such sums as may be necessary. (Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990.)

The FSLIC Resolution Fund (FRF) is the successor to FSLIC assets and liabilities from resolved cases. The Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC), a separate agency managed by the FDIC, assumes responsibility for the FSLIC's unresolved cases.

Funds for FRF operations come from: income earned on its assets; liquidation proceeds from receiverships established prior to January 1, 1989; the proceeds of the sale of bonds by the Financing Corporation; and a portion of insurance premiums paid by SAIF members. The Act authorizes appropriations to make up any shortfall. FRF will terminate upon the disposition of all its assets, and any net proceeds would be paid to the Treasury.

Federal disaster assistance is a nationwide program operated pursuant to the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (Public Law 100–707). Supplementary assistance is provided to individuals, and State and local governments, in the event of a Presidentially declared emergency or major disaster. Civil defense.—The civil defense programs feature an Integrated Emergency Management System approach. The programs are designed to ensure a basic emergency response infrastructure with potential for rapid enhancement of capabilities when necessary (the surge concept), providing emergency capabilities to mitigate, prepare for, respond to, and recover from emergencies caused by natural, technological, and attack-related hazards.

National earthquake program and other hazards.—This program provides for FEMA's activities as lead agency in the National Earthquake Hazards Reduction Program, and for the enhancement of State and local governments' capability to prepare for, respond to, and mitigate earthquakes, and other specific hazards. It also provides for integration of interagency plans for direct Federal response to a catastrophic earthquake, and for FEMA's capability to act as a member of that direct response team. Program activities include analyses, needs assessments, technical guidance and financial support designed to assist State and local governments in developing a comprehensive approach to earthquake hazards mitigation and natural disaster preparedness planning.

Technological hazards.—This program includes activities in the areas of radiological emergency preparedness and hazardous materials. Radiological preparedness provides assistance to State and local governments through the issuance of guidance, review and approval of plans, and evaluation of exercises. The program is focused on improvement of or provision of a substitute for State and local capabilities to cope with radiological accidents at commercial nuclear power plants, other fixed nuclear facilities, nuclear materials license holders and transportation of radioactive materials. Hazardous materials provides for FEMA participation in Federal interagency efforts toward education, information, community preparedness, and planning for Federal, State and local response to hazardous materials incidents.

Federal preparedness.—The goals of the Federal preparedness activity are to achieve Government readiness to ensure that the Nation will be able to respond to, manage, and recover from peacetime or wartime national security emergencies and to enable Government, at all levels, to cope with the consequences of accidental, natural, and man-caused occurrences.

Training and fire programs.—This activity prepares Federal, State and local officials, their supporting staff, and the public to meet the responsibilities and challenges of domestic emergencies through planning, mitigation, preparedness, response, and long-term recovery. Educational programs are provided through the Emergency Management Institute and the National Fire Academy. In addition, the U.S. Fire Administration concentrates on providing a Federal focus on identifying problems with which the Nation's fire and rescue services must deal, finding solutions to these problems, and supporting State and local fire protection and emergency rescue efforts.

Flood insurance and mitigation.—This activity involves the operation of a program that combines mapping, regulatory, and technical-assistance efforts for the purposes of responding to known flood hazards and mitigating their effects through a comprehensive approach to the management of flood plains. This activity is funded through transfer of unobligated balances from the National Flood Insurance Fund.

This appropriation provides agencywide audit and investigative functions to identify and correct management and administrative deficiencies which create conditions for existing or potential instances of fraud, waste and mismanagement. The audits function provides internal audit, contract audit, and inspections services. Contract audits provide professional advice to agency contracting officials on accounting and financial matters relative to the negotiation, award, administration, repricing, and settlement of contracts. The National Insurance Development Fund provided the funding source for two programs authorized by the Urban Property Protection and Reinsurance Act of 1968, as amended: (1) The FAIR (Fair Access to Insurance Requirements) Plan/Riot Reinsurance Program, and (2) the Federal Crime Insurance Program. The Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1984 (Public Law 98-181) did not extend authority for the Riot Reinsurance Program beyond November 30, 1983. The Federal Crime Insurance Program has been extended until September 30, 1991. The budget estimates assume there will be no new policies issued subsequent to those dates. However, there will be operating expenses associated with unexpired policies and the close-out of contractor activities.

Insurance claims.—Claims reflect insurance payments in the program.

Operating expenses.—Expenses are incurred by fiscal agents in issuing policies, settling claims, and maintaining accounting and statistical records.

Administrative expenses.—This represents the administrative cost of operating the programs.

Interest expense.—This represents interest on Treasury borrowings needed to defray underwriting and loss expenses of the crime insurance program.

Financing.—Claims and expenses are estimated to be paid from premium income and Treasury borrowings. Premiums are projected to increase by five percent annually in order to reduce losses.

Operating results.—Claims and expenses are expected to exceed premium income resulting in a decrease in the reserves of the fund. Cumulative losses for this program are projected to be $155 million at the end of 1991.

The National Flood Insurance Act of 1968, as amended, authorizes the Federal Government to provide flood insurance on a national basis. Flood insurance may be sold or continued in force only in communities which enact and enforce appropriate flood plain management measures. Communities must participate in the program within one year of the time they are identified as flood prone in order to be eligible for flood insurance and some forms of Federal financial assistance for acquisition or construction purposes. In 1991, the budget proposes to collect the administrative costs associated with flood insurance activities from policy holders.

Under the emergency program, structures in identified flood-prone areas are eligible for limited amounts of coverage at subsidized insurance rates. Under the regular program, studies must be made of different flood risks in flood-prone areas to establish actuarial premium rates. These rates are charged for insurance on new construction. Coverage is available on virtually all types of buildings and their contents in amounts up to $245 thousand for residential and $550 thousand for other types.

Significant indicators of program size are as follows:

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Policies in force	2,200,750	2,310,788	2,426,327
Insurance in force (billions of dollars)	179.3	192.0	205.7

Budget program—Insurance underwriting expense.—Cost of initiating and maintaining flood insurance policies is estimated at $215,472 thousand in 1991.

Loss and adjustment expense.—Insured flood losses and associated loss adjustment expense is estimated at $324,397 thousand in 1991.

Interest expense.—Though no interest expenses for Treasury borrowings are projected, a ceiling of $20,000,000 is requested to cover charges for purchasing Treasury securities and possible unanticipated interest costs.

The budget proposes to recover the cost of the following activities from policyholders and to reimburse other appropriations in FEMA's budget:

Flood studies and surveys.—These studies are estimated at $36,283 thousand in 1991.

Flood hazard reduction.—This activity, which includes the State support services element is estimated at $4,020 thousand in 1991.

Purchase of property.—This activity is estimated at $4,720,000 for 1991.

Salaries and expenses.—This activity provides for salaries and related expenses of all Federal staff administering the National Flood Insurance Program and is estimated at $11,078 thousand in 1991.

Financing.—The Administrator is authorized to borrow up to $1 billion to carry out the program. The program is financed through premium income and appropriations to repay borrowing.

Operating results.—The program achieved its goal of becoming self-supporting for the average loss year; therefore, no additional rate increases are planned through 1991.

The Federal Housing Finance Board, an independent agency, was established by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989. The Act prescribes that the duties of the Board shall be: (1) to supervise the Federal Home Loan Banks, (2) to ensure that the Banks carry out their housing finance mission, (3) to ensure that the Banks remain adequately capitalized and able to raise funds in the capital markets, and (4) to ensure that the Banks operate in a safe and sound manner. (The Board succeeds to the authority of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board with respect to the Banks.)

The management of the Board is vested in a five-member Board of Directors comprising the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and four other Directors appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The term of a Director is seven years.

The Board has the power (1) to supervise the Banks and promulgate and enforce such regulations and orders as are necessary, (2) to suspend or remove for cause a director, officer, employee, or agent of any Bank or joint office, (3) to determine necessary expenditures of the Board and the manner in which such expenditures shall be incurred, allowed, and paid, and (4) to use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as a department or agency of the United States.

FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK BOARD

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act abolished the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and divided its responsibilities between two new organizations. The Office of Thrift Supervision, a Treasury Department bureau, assumes regulatory responsibilities for thrifts. The Federal Housing Finance Board, an independent agency, assumes oversight of the credit operations of the 12 regional Federal Home Loan Banks.

The Act also abolished the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC). The Savings Association Insurance Fund (SAIF), under the management of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), insures thrifts formerly insured by the FSLIC. FSLIC assets and liabilities from resolved cases were transferred to the FSLIC Resolution Fund, also under FDIC management. The Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) assumes responsibility for the FSLIC's unresolved cases.

The Act instructed the RTC to sell or liquidate the Federal Asset Disposition Association (FADA) within six months of the Act's enactment. FADA is currently in the process of being liquidated. No budgetary or financial data are available for presentation below.

The Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board is responsible for managing the Thrift Savings Fund. The Thrift Savings Fund is a special tax-deferred savings fund established by the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986. Due to the fiduciary nature of the Thrift Savings Fund, the Fund is not included in the totals of the Federal budget. Information on the financial status and activities of the Thrift Savings Fund follow this account.

Program administration for the Thrift Savings Fund is financed by reimbursement from the Fund. In addition, the Board may require employing agencies to contribute an amount not to exceed one percent of employing agency contributions to purchase insurance to cover the potential liability of persons who serve in a fiduciary capacity on behalf of the Fund. The Board has ceased requiring such contributions because of legislation enacted in January 1988 which provided an alternative source of funding for a major portion of such liabilities. This legislation reduces estimated expenses for insurance premiums. Reimbursements for program expenses are derived first from Fund forfeitures of agency one percent automatic contributions for employees who separate from the Federal government prior to vesting, and subsequently from earnings on all participant and agency contributions to the Fund.

INFORMATION SCHEDULES ON THE THRIFT SAVINGS FUND

The following schedules reflect those for the Thrift Savings Fund which is not in the Federal budget.

The Thrift Savings Fund is composed of individual accounts maintained by the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board on behalf of the individual Federal employee participants in the Fund. All Federal employees are eligible to contribute to the Fund. However, only those employees covered by the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS) will have their contributions matched by employing agencies in accordance with the formulas prescribed by law. Within certain restrictions imposed during a phase-in period, FERS employees are entitled to select how contributions are distributed among three investment funds: a Government Securities Investment Fund, a Fixed Income Investment Fund, and a Common Stock Index Investment Fund.

Because the Thrift Savings Fund recently commenced operations, the estimates of the status of these funds in 1990 and 1991 are based on the initial years of experience. Employee participation in the Fund is entirely voluntary, so actual results could vary significantly from these estimates. The estimated status of the three separate funds is shown below:

The Federal Trade Commission is charged by law with ensuring that competition in the marketplace is vigorous, free, and fair. This is accomplished by eliminating threats to fair and honest competition from all sources, both public and private.

Maintaining competition.—The Commission's efforts are aimed at fostering and preserving our competitive system with the goal of maximizing consumer welfare. In addition to enforcing the antitrust laws against private sector restraints on competition, the Commission also scrutinizes regulatory policies that unduly restrain competition, and tries to exert a procompetitive influence in the development of such policies.

Consumer protection.—The Commission is charged with eliminating unfair or deceptive acts or practices affecting commerce. The goal of the consumer protection mission is to improve market performance so that consumers can make informed choices when exercising their purchasing power. To accomplish this goal, the Commission will remove harmful private and public restrictions on market performance; encourage business to provide consumers with accurate and useful information; and reinforce market forces that enhance consumer welfare.

The President's budget continues an increase of staffing and program level (obligations) for the Commission that started in 1990. Staffing is increasing from 894 workyears in 1989 to 970 in the President's budget for 1991. Program level for the Commission is increasing from $67 million in 1989 to $77 million in 1991. These increased staffing and program levels will allow the Commission to pursue its mission more aggressively.

The programs administered by the Federal Trade Commission, beginning in 1990, are funded by appropriated funds and fees assessed for pre-merger notification filings under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act, as required by section 605 of Public Law 101–162. For 1991, the FTC will use $20 million in premerger filings fees to finance its activities.

The U.S. International Trade Commission is an independent agency created by act of Congress. The Commission's current powers and duties are provided for by the Tariff Act of 1930; the Trade Act of 1974; the Trade Agreements Act of 1979; the Agricultural Adjustment Act; section 1911 of the Financial Institution Regulatory and Interest Rate Control Act of 1978, 12 U.S.C. 635a–2, the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984; and the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988.

The Commission conducts investigations and makes findings concerning whether: (1) increased imports are a substantial cause of serious injury to an industry; (2) imports of goods that are subsidized or are being sold at less than fair value are materially injuring an industry; (3) unfair import practices have the threat or effect of substantially injuring an industry or restraining or monopolizing trade and commerce in the United States; and (4) imports of agricultural products are materially interfering with certain programs of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Commission advises the President as to the probable economic effect on the domestic industry and consumers, of modification of duties and other barriers to trade which may be considered for inclusion in any proposed trade agreement with foreign countries. Further, the Commission, at the request of the President, the Congress, or on the Commission's own motion, undertakes comprehensive studies and provides reports on key issues relating to international trade and economic policy matters.

The Commission, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce, establishes for statistical purposes an enumeration of articles imported into the United States and exported from the United States, and seeks to establish comparability of such statistics with statistical programs for domestic production.

The Commission also issues a publication containing the U.S. tariff schedule and related matters and considers questions concerning the arrangements of such schedules and the classification of articles.

Pursuant to section 175 of the Trade Act of 1974, the budget estimates for the Commission are included without revision by the President.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is responsible for the regulation of interstate surface transportation. Consistent with the downward trend in the regulation of surface transportation, which grew out of the regulatory reform legislation of 1980 and 1982, the Commission's staff has been reduced by 62 percent since 1981.

Motor program.—This includes the regulation of rates, the granting of operating authorities, the regulation of mergers and acquisitions, and the planning, analysis, and policy development associated with these activities as they relate to the Interstate Commerce Act as amended by the Motor Carrier Act of 1980, the Household Goods Transportation Act of 1980, the Bus Regulatory Reform Act of 1982, and the Surface Freight Forwarder Deregulation Act of 1986. The activities of interstate motor freight, bus, and water carriers are moni-

Rail program.—This encompasses the regulation of rates and of mergers, acquisitions, construction, and abandonment of railway lines, as well as the planning, analysis, and policy development associated with these activities as provided for in the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended by the Staggers Rail Act of 1980. Staff ensure compliance with railroad regulations in order to protect the public interest.

General management and administration.—These activities provide support services, including data processing, budget and financial management, personnel, procurement, and contracting services.

Legislation will be proposed to sunset the Interstate Commerce Commission and to deregulate completely the interstate motor freight, household goods freight forwarder, property broker, bus and water carrier industries by October 1, 1990. The enactment of this legislation would eliminate a major portion of ICC's workload. The remaining rail activities would be transferred to the Departments of Justice and Transportation. Handling of consumer complaints regarding household goods movers would be transferred to the Federal Trade Commission.

Payments for Directed Rail Service

(limitation on obligations)

None of the funds provided in this Act shall be available for the execution of programs the obligations for which can reasonably be expected to exceed $475,000 for directed rail service authorized under 49 U.S.C. 11125 or any other Act. (Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990.)

Once a railroad ceases operations due to a lack of cash or a court order, the Commission may direct other railroads to provide service over the track of the railroad which ceased operations and may compensate the directed rail carrier for its services. The responsibility for this activity would be transferred to the Department of Transportation, as part of the proposal to sunset the ICC.

Legislation will be proposed to sunset the ICC and transfer remaining functions to the Departments of Justice and Transportation and the Federal Trade Commission. Payments for Directed Rail Service will transfer to the Department of Transportation.

Public Laws 99–500 and 99–591 established the James Madison Memorial Fellowship Foundation to operate a fellowship program to encourage graduate study of the American Constitution. The same law provided advance appropriations of $10 million for 1988 and $10 million for 1989 to establish the Foundation's trust fund. These funds have been invested by the Secretary of the Treasury in U.S. Treasury securities and interest earned will be available for carrying out the activities of the Foundation.

The Foundation is authorized to award fellowships of up to $12 thousand to individuals selected for their academic achievement and their potential to become secondary school teachers of social studies and American history. No funds are available for fellowships until at least $10 million in private contributions have been received. The foundation expects to be able to award the first fellowships in 1991 at a level of $6,000 each.

Funds for program administration in 1990 and 1991 will cover costs of planning and fundraising and operating the new fellowship program.

The National Archives and Records Administration provides for basic operations dealing with management of the Government's archives and records, operation of Presidential libraries, and for the review for declassification of classified security information.

Records centers.—This activity provides for the accessioning, storage, reference service, and disposal of the semiactive and non-current records of Federal agencies through a nationwide system of 14 records centers. Significant savings result from use of low cost records storage and the efficient and timely disposal of non-permanent records.

Archives and related services.—This activity provides for selecting, preserving, describing, and making available to the general public, scholars, and Federal agencies, the permanently valuable records of the Federal Government and the historical material in Presidential libraries, related publications and exhibit programs, and the appraisal of all Federal records. It also provides for the publication of the Federal Register and Code of Federal Regulations, the U.S. Statutes-at-Large, Presidential documents and for a program to improve the quality of regulations and the public's access to them. It also provides for the National Audiovisual Center's audiovisual information and management programs.

Through the records declassification program, historically valuable information in the records of the Federal Government and in donated historical materials are made available to the public by declassifying as much information as possible without endangering the national security.

National Historical Publications and Records Commission.—This Commission coordinates and provides technical assistance to archival planning and assessment projects in many States and also offers a specialized reference service to Federal, State and local and nongovernment institutions that are publishing significant portions of records from official government files. The Commission also lends its endorsement and support to those specific projects that further the basic objectives stated in its legislation.

Archives II Facility.—Provides for construction and related services of a new archival facility. Costs of construction are financed by $301,702 thousand of federally, guaranteed debt issued in 1989.

The insurance fund is used to carry out a program of insurance for member accounts in Federal credit unions and State-chartered credit unions which apply and qualify for insurance, authorized by Public Law 91–468, enacted October 19, 1970.

Budget program.—The activities consist of: (a) providing member account insurance, (b) formulating standards and requirements for insured credit unions, and (c) providing for liquidation or other disposition of the assets and liabilities of solvent and insolvent insured credit unions. The fund also reimburses the operating fund for its share of the Agency's administrative costs. The reimbursement percentage which is reviewed and adjusted periodically, is currently at fifty percent.

The extent of the program is estimated as follows:

Item:	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Number of insured credit unions	13,450	13,350	13,300
Insured shares of member institutions as of June 30 (in millions of dollars)	161,900	169,995	178,495

It is estimated that approximately 4,550 State-chartered credit unions will be enrolled in the program by the end of 1991.

Financing.—For calendar year 1990, the credit union's required annual insurance premium of one-twelfth of 1 percent of their total member share accounts has been waived. However, as a result of Public Law 98–369 (July 18, 1984), each insured credit union is required to deposit and maintain in the insurance fund 1 percent of its member share accounts. The fund is structured to be entirely self supporting through the monies paid by member credit unions. The monies received plus the income generated from their investment are expected to cover all administrative and financial costs, as well as increase the fund balance proportionate to insured share growth. It is anticipated that the capital generated from the 1 percent deposit will eliminate the need to assess the annual premium except in years of extraordinary credit union losses. The fund has $100 million in borrowing authority from the Treasury for use in unforeseen emergencies.

Operating results.—Anticipated net income of $65,576 thousand will be retained in the fund, raising the balance for unforeseen emergencies to $2.2 billion by the end of 1991.

The National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility was established under Public Law 95-630. It began operations on October 1, 1979. The Central Liquidity Facility provides loans to member credit unions for seasonal and emergency needs.

The two primary sources of funds for the Facility are stock subscriptions from credit unions and borrowings from the Federal Financing Bank. Credit unions, which choose to become members of the Facility, are required to purchase stock equal to one-half of 1 percent of their assets. One-half of the subscription in stock is forwarded to the Facility and deposited in the fund. The remaining half of the subscription remains on call in the credit union in investments as approved by the NCUA Board.

The Board resolves representation disputes in industry and remedies and prevents specified unfair labor practices by employers or labor organizations. Case intake in 1989 was 31,988 unfair labor practice cases and 8,535 representation cases. Estimates for unfair labor practice cases are 31,957 for 1990 and 32,596 for 1991. Representation case estimates are 8,876 for 1990 and 9,231 for 1991.

Field investigation.—Charges of unfair labor practices and petition for elections to resolve representation disputes are investigated by regional office personnel. Over 93 percent of the unfair labor practice cases and about 84 percent of the representation cases are closed by settlement, dismissal, or withdrawal. The remainder are prepared for public hearing. The agency strives to maximize the voluntary settlement of all cases and the avoidance of litigation.

Administrative law judge hearing.—Administrative law judges conduct public hearings in unfair labor practice cases. Their findings and recommendations are set forth in their decisions. In 1989 there were 639 hearings closed, 31 proceedings were adjusted after close of hearing, and 629 decisions issued. The estimate for 1990 is for 715 hearings to be closed, 12 adjusted after hearing, and 715 decisions. The estimate for 1991 is for 722 hearings to be closed, 15 adjusted after hearing, and 722 decisions.

Board adjudication.—In an unfair labor practice case a judge's decision becomes a Board order if no exceptions are filed. About 30 percent of these decisions become automatic Board orders or are complied with voluntarily. The remainder with exceptions filed requires contested Board decision. In 1989, 750 such Board decisions were issued; the estimates for 1990 and 1991 are 671 and 691, respectively. In representation cases, regional directors initially decide the issues by Board delegation. In 1989 regional directors issued 1,048 such decisions; the estimate is 951 for 1990 and 977 in 1991. The Board itself decides representation issues on referral from regional directors or by granting a request for review of a regional director's decision. In 1989 the Board issued 79 representation decisions; the estimates for 1990 and 1991 are 90 and 95, respectively. The Board also ruled on 209 objection and challenge questions in election cases in 1989; it is estimated that 207 such rulings will be required in 1990 and 216 in 1991.

Securing compliance with Board orders.—If the parties do not voluntarily comply with the Board's order involving unfair labor practices, the Board must request the appellate courts to enforce its decisions. In 1989 a total of 177 Board decisions of all kinds required such litigation; the estimate for 1990 is 203, and for 1991 it is 211.

Mediatory services.—The Board mediates disputes over wages, hours, and working conditions for some 727 rail and air carriers and approximately 908,000 employees in the two industries.

The Board also provides technical assistance to enable labor and industry representatives to explore informally the relevant economic and noneconomic problems that condition collective bargaining in the railroad and airline industries.

The Board investigates representation disputes involving the various crafts or classes of railroad and airline employees to determine their choice of representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining.

Voluntary arbitration and emergency disputes.—When the parties fail to resolve their disputes through mediation, they are urged to submit their differences to arbitration. If neither mediation nor voluntary arbitration is successful, the President, when notified of disputes which threaten seriously to interrupt service, may appoint emergency boards to investigate and report on the disputes under section 160 of the Railway Labor Act (RLA). Such reports usually serve as a basis for resolving the disputes.

The Northeast Rail Service Act of 1981 amended the Railway Labor Act by adding a new emergency dispute procedure covering disputes between a publicly funded and operated commuter carrier and its employees. The 1981 act requires the Board to appoint the public members of factfinding panels on Conrail.

Adjustment of railroad grievances.—Railroad employee grievances resulting from disputes over the interpretation or application of collective bargaining contracts may be brought for settlement to the National Railroad Adjustment Board (NRAB). The divisions of the Board are composed of an equal number of carrier and union representatives compensated by the party or parties they represent. Public Law 89-456 provides for the adjustment of disputes involving grievances resulting from interpretation or application of bargaining agreements in the railroad industry otherwise referable to the NRAB.

Administrative direction and support for the public law boards, special boards of adjustment, and the NRAB are provided by Federal employees who are compensated by the National Mediation Board.

Note.—Includes $20,000 thousand in budget authority in 1991 for activities previously financed from Academic Research Facilities. The amount of $19,690 thousand is estimated for these activities in 1990.

The major research program activities of the Foundation are:

Biological, behavioral, and social sciences.—This activity supports research in cellular and molecular biology, behavioral and neural sciences, environmental biology, and social and economic sciences. Among the research topics covered are: how living organisms develop, grow and reproduce; the behavior of biological communities; ecology and physiology of populations; biological, environmental, and cultural factors affecting the behavior of human beings and animals; instrumentation development; data base integration and management and analysis of the underlying forms and processes affecting economies, organizations and societies.

Computer and information sciences and engineering.—Research is directed at "information processing" in the broadest sense of the term, ranging from fundamental theory to systems engineering. In addition, significant attention is devoted to advanced computer and communication facilities and services for the general U.S. scientific and engineering research community. Research activities include fundamental computing research, information systems applications, and microelectronics information processing systems. Service activities include access to national supercomputer centers and support for national research networking, and the research and development required to make them maximally productive.

Engineering.—Research supported by this activity aims to increase U.S. engineering capability and strength, and focus that capability and strength on areas which are relevant to national problems and long-term needs. Topics supported include: electrical and communications systems; chemical and thermal systems; mechanical and structural systems; design and manufacturing systems; biological and critical systems; engineering centers; and engineering education and infrastructure development.

Geosciences.—This research advances knowledge of the properties and dynamics of the planet Earth. The program includes studies of geologic forces and their history; ocean dynamics and resources; the influence of the Arctic; and the physics and chemistry of the atmosphere. This research includes much of the Foundation's contribution to the U.S. Global Change Research Program being coordinated by the Federal Coordinating Council on Science, Engineering, and Technology's Committee on Earth Sciences. The U.S. Global Change Research Program will be highlighted in a separate document accompanying the President's 1991 Budget.

Mathematical and physical sciences.—Research in this activity is directed at increasing understanding of natural laws and phenomena. It includes research in mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, and materials science. Studies deal with a broad range of significant science areas such as new amorphous materials and materials of limited dimensionality, organometallic chemistry and catalysis, the fundamental forces and constituents of physical matter, studies of galaxies, planets, and stars, and new mathematical structures and techniques. Provision of modern research instrumentation and facilities and support of young scientists is stressed in all programs.

Research facilities modernization.—This activity provides competitively awarded grants for the repair, renovation, or, in exceptional cases, replacement of facilities used for research and research training at academic and non-profit institutions. In 1990, the Academic research facilities activity was separately accounted for under the Academic Research Facilities appropriation.

Scientific, technological, and international affairs.—This activity facilitates international scientific cooperation; provides policy-oriented data, information and analysis; and supports cross-disciplinary activities that strengthen the Nation's scientific and engineering research base. Programs cover small business innovation research; cooperative scientific activities between the U.S. and industrialized and developing countries; policy research and analysis; science resources studies; and special research initiation and improvement activities.

Program development and management.—This activity provides for the operation, support, management, and direction of all NSF programs and activities and includes necessary funds to develop, manage, and coordinate these program activities except for the Office of Inspector General which is funded from a separate appropriation beginning in 1990.

NSF headquarters relocation.—This activity provides for significant non-recurring costs associated with the relocation of the NSF headquarters. These costs relate to design and engineering and procurement of major infrastructure and support systems necessary for the new facility.

The National Transportation Safety Board, as an independent nonregulatory agency, is charged with promoting transportation safety through the investigation of accidents, the conduct of special studies, the development of recommendations to prevent accidents, the evaluation of the effectiveness of other Government agencies in preventing transportation accidents, and the review of appeals on actions taken against transportation certificates and licenses.

The 1991 budget provides for 22 additional workyears over the 1990 post-sequester level, for a total of 348 workyears. The increased staffing provides for 18 workyears dedicated to enhancing the Board's Accident Investigation and Technology programs, whose primary mission is to improve transportation safety through prompt and thorough investigation of transportation accidents. This additional staffing will improve the personnel depth of several of the Board's critical technical and investigator functions.

The Office of Navajo and Hopi Indian Relocation was established by Public Law 93-531 to plan and conduct relocation activities associated with the settlement of a land dispute in northern Arizona between the two tribes.

Bonuses are paid to clients who volunteered for relocation prior to July 7, 1982. Relocation of clients includes such activities as certification, housing acquisition and construction, and land acquisition. Discretionary funds will be used for activities which will facilitate and expedite the overall relocation effort.

The major activities of the Corporation include: establishing neighborhood partnership programs; assisting in expanding Neighborhood Housing Services (NHS), including multi-family housing strategies, to other neighborhoods; providing technical assistance to NHS organizations; identifying, evaluating, and supporting neighborhood preservation projects that show promise as strategies for reversing neighborhood decline; replicating successful neighborhood preservation projects; and promoting a national secondary market for local NHS revolving loan funds.

The Corporation receives both Federal and non-Federal funding to finance its program activities. The program and financing schedule above reflects direct Federal appropriations as well as an unobligated balance transferring in from the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA). For 1991, a program level of $24,500,000 is requested. This level will be achieved by $17,895,000 of new budget authority in addition to the estimated $6,605,000 unobligated balance from NCUA. The following business-type tables reflect the total program activity of the Corporation and include all sources of financing, both Federal and non-Federal.

Reactor safety and safeguards regulation.—This mission area encompasses all NRC licensing and inspection of civilian reactor facilities and designs as required by the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, as amended. This includes the responsibility for evaluating the public health effects, safety, environmental, safeguards, and antitrust aspects of reactor facilities and for ensuring that reactor facilities are designed, constructed, and operated safely and are in compliance with agency regulations. Reactor safety and safeguards regulation is carried out through the following seven major programs: reactor licensing-application reviews and inspections; reactor operations reviews; human performance in reactor safety; reactor operations inspections; operating reactor license maintenance and regulatory improvements; reactor accident management; and reactor safeguards. During fiscal year 1991, the NRC will continue to place more emphasis on the oversight of plant operations and maintenance of over 100 existing licensed commercial nuclear power plants to ensure their continuing improvement in safety performance and will initiate efforts designed to ensure that the agency will be prepared to review and certify design proposals for advanced reactors and to review reactor operating license renewal applications.

Nuclear safety research.—Work carried out in nuclear safety research has three major purposes. The first is to provide independent expertise and information for making timely regulatory judgments needed to support the Commission's decision-making process. The information should be independent in the sense that it is not derived solely from information provided by licensees and that it has received peer review by experts who did not perform the research. Research required for this purpose is mostly oriented to problems that are foreseeable in the near term. The second purpose is to anticipate problems of potential safety significance for which new or expanded knowledge can assist the NRC in pursuing its mission. To this end, exploratory research is frequently required to provide new knowledge. The expansion of knowledge can help to recognize unforeseen situations and to prepare for dealing with them. Research for this purpose is generally long term, requiring effort over a period of 5 to 10 years. The third purpose is to develop the regulations and guides necessary to implement Commission policy or technical requirements. Nuclear safety research is carried out through the following five major programs: integrity of reactor components; preventing damage to reactor cores; reactor containment performance; confirming the safety of low-level waste disposal; and resolving safety issues and developing regulations. The major emphasis during fiscal year 1991 will continue to be on plant aging, accident management, and severe accident risk reduction; completion of action on unresolved safety issues and guidance on the licensing of advanced plants; and on license renewal of operating nuclear power plants.

Nuclear material safety, safeguards, and low-level waste regulation.—This mission area encompasses all NRC licensing and inspection of nuclear fuel-cycle facilities, users of nuclear materials, the transport of nuclear materials, the safe management and disposal of low-level radioactive wastes, and uranium recovery activities and related remedial actions. This includes the responsibility for evaluating the public health effects, safety, safeguards, and environmental aspects of a variety of licensees, ranging from very complex operations such as the manufacturing of reactor fuel and the production of medical radiopharmaceuticals, to relatively simple operations, such as the use of small quantities of radioisotopes in medical diagnostics.

It also includes the safeguards review for all NRC licensing activities involving the export of special nuclear material and the establishment of an integrated agency program for the decontamination and decommissioning of facilities and sites associated with all NRC-licensed activities. Nuclear material safety, safeguards, and low-level waste regulation is carried out through the following three major programs: nuclear material safety; nuclear material transportation and safeguards; and low-level waste. The nuclear material safety program affects approximately 8,000 licensees across the United States. The major emphasis during fiscal year 1991 will continue to be on the implementation of the Low-Level Waste Policy Act of 1980, as amended in 1985; the Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978; and on improving licensee performance, particularly fuel-cycle facilities, radiographers, and medical licensees; and to begin the review of an application to construct and operate the first commercial uranium enrichment piant in the United States.

High-level nuclear waste regulation.—This mission area encompasses all NRC public health and safety licensing, inspection, and environmental reviews for the safe management, storage, transportation, and disposal of high-level radioactive wastes (including spent fuel); research to confirm the safety of high-level waste management, storage, transportation, and disposal; and independent safety advice and adjudicatory reviews of NRC regulatory actions. High-level nuclear waste regulation is carried out through four major programs: high-level waste licensing; confirming the safety of high-level waste disposal; independent safety advice and adjudicatory reviews; and the Licensing Support System. The major emphasis during fiscal year 1991 will continue to be focused on the implementation of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982, as amended in 1987.

Special and independent reviews, investigations, and enforcement.—This mission area encompasses the review, evaluation, and investigation of NRC's licensees; the conduct of diagnostic evaluations of individual reactor plant safety; evaluation of both foreign and domestic operational events; ensuring licensee compliance with regulatory requirements through a comprehensive enforcement policy; and providing advice to the Commission on license applications and amendments. In addition, the NRC maintains an emergency operations center to receive calls of reportable events and determine appropriate regulatory response, and a technical training center to assure that NRC technical employees are well prepared to carry out their responsibilities. Special and independent reviews, investigations, and enforcement are carried out through the following six major programs: special safety reviews; operational experience evaluation; independent safety reviews and advice; independent adjudicatory reviews; external investigations; and enforcement.

The OGE discharges its responsibilities to preserve and promote public confidence in the integrity of Federal officials by developing rules and regulations pertaining to conflicts of interest, post employment restrictions, standards of conduct, and public and confidential financial disclosure in the executive branch; monitoring compliance with the public and confidential financial disclosure requirements of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 and the Ethics Reform Act of 1989, Public Law 101-194, to determine possible violations of applicable laws or regulations and recommending appropriate corrective action; consulting with and assisting various officials in evaluating the effectiveness of applicable laws and the resolution of individual problems; and preparing formal advisory opinions, informal letter opinions, policy memoranda, and Federal Register entries on how to interpret and comply with the requirements on conflicts of interest, post employment, standards of conduct, and financial disclosure. The Ethics in Government Act, as amended by Public Law 98-150, requires that estimated appropriations requests be indicated for the four fiscal years beyond the budget year. The FY 1991 request is at the legislated ceiling of $3,500,000. Unless the legislated ceiling is changed, requests for fiscal years after 1991 cannot exceed that amount.

The Special Counsel is empowered to investigate prohibited personnel practices in Federal agencies and political activities prohibited by the Hatch Act, and to administratively prosecute offending employees and agencies before the Merit Systems Protection Board. The Special Counsel may also transmit "whistleblower" allegations to the agency head concerned and require an agency investigation and a report to the Congress and the President when found appropriate.

Many cases that are referred to the Office are resolved without recourse to formal proceedings before the Board. Efforts to obtain such informal resolutions will continue in 1990.

In 1991, the Transit Reservation System, which is designed to partially finance the capital program, is projected to generate $6.7 million. Vessel traffic volume and other indices of workload are as follows:

Interest expense.—Interest expense on the investment of the U.S. Government in the Canal is being paid into miscellaneous receipts of the U.S. Treasury.

Special retirement costs.—This provides for the Commission costs for amortizing the expense for the special retirement provision of the treaty implementation legislation.

Other general.—This includes other miscellaneous expenses not under limitation.

Financing.—The operation of the Canal is conducted on a commercial basis with revenues derived from tolls collected from vessels and other essential supporting services. Revenues collected are deposited in an account in the U.S. Treasury. Operating and capital expenditures are then funded from this account. The Commission may borrow from the U.S. Treasury not more than $100 million outstanding at any time. The Commission anticipates the use of $4,078 thousand and $6,164 thousand of the borrowing authority in 1990 and 1991, respec-

The Postal Reorganization Act of 1970, Public Law 91-375, converted the Post Office Department into the U.S. Postal Service, an independent establishment within the executive branch. The Postal Service commenced operations July 1, 1971. This agency is charged with providing patrons with reliable mail service at reasonable rates and fees.

The U.S. Postal Service is governed by an 11-member Board of Governors, including 9 Governors appointed by the President, a Postmaster General who is selected by the Governors, and a Deputy Postmaster General who is selected by the Governors and the Postmaster General.

Decisions on changes in domestic rates of postage and fees for postal services are recommended to the Governors of the Postal Service by the independent Postal Rate Commission after a hearing on the record under the Administrative Procedure Act. The Commission also recommends decisions on changes in the domestic mail classification schedule to the Governors. Decisions of the Governors on rates of postage, fees for postal services, and mail classification are final, subject to judicial review.

For FY 1989, the Postal Service Fund (Fund) was included in the congressional and executive budget process and taken into account in making calculations under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Gramm-Rudman-Hollings). The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 amended title 39 of the U.S. Code by adding a new section, 2009a, which provides that, beginning in FY 1990, the receipts and disbursements of the Fund shall not be considered as part of the congressional and executive budget process and shall not be taken into account in making calculations under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings. This legislation also makes the Postal Service liable for the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) COLAs for postal retirees who have retired after September 30, 1986, and their survivors. The liability will be apportioned to reflect civilian service since postal reorganization (i.e., service performed after June 30, 1971), and will be amortized over 15 years. The Postal Service also assumes the liability for the employer share of Federal Employees Health Benefit premiums for survivors of postal annuitants who have retired after September 30, 1986, for whom the Postal Service already pays the employer's share of the premium, and for survivors of employees who died in service after that date.

Programs.—Included are all postal activities providing window services; processing, delivery, and transportation of mail; research and development; administration of postal field activities; and associated expenses of providing facilities and financing.

Financing.—The activities of the U.S. Postal Service are financed from the following sources: (1) mail and services revenue; (2) reimbursements from Federal and non-Federal sources; (3) proceeds from borrowing; (4) interest from U.S. securities and other investments; and (5) appropriations by the Congress. All receipts and deposits are made to the Postal Service Fund and are available without fiscal year limitation for payment of all expenses incurred, retirement of obligations, investment in capital assets, and investment in obligations and securities.

Separate legislation also increased the Postal Service's statutory borrowing authority beginning in FY 1991. Section 2005 of title 39, as amended, increases the Postal Service's borrowing authority by $2.5 billion in FY 1991 for a revised ceiling of $12.5 billion and an additional $2.5 billion in FY 1992 for a revised total ceiling of $15 billion. The total net increase in amounts outstanding in any one fiscal year were also increased and now may not exceed $2.0 billion in obligations issued for the purpose of capital improvements and $1.0 billion for the purpose of paying operating expenses. As of September 30, 1991, it is expected that the total debt instruments issued and outstanding pursuant to this authority will amount to $9.2196 billion.

Operating.—Estimated revenue will total $40.478 billion in 1991. This includes $39.658 billion from mail and services revenue, $335 million from investment income, and a net revenue forgone appropriation of $485 million. Total expenses are estimated at $43.649 billion in 1991. An adjustment of $3.172 billion needed to meet the statutory requirement to break-even, eliminated an estimated net loss of $3.172 billion that otherwise would result.

The Postal Reorganization Act of 1970 established the Postal Service as a fully self-sufficient, independent entity. Postal revenues were to cover the full costs of postal operations. When the Act was passed, the Postal Service received substantial taxpayer subsidies, both appropriated and unappropriated. Consistent with the intent of the 1970 Act, Congress has taken steps over time to reduce these subsidies. Under the 1974 Civil Service Retirement Fund—Postal Employee Benefits Act, the Postal Service assumed responsibility for paying unfunded retirement costs from wage schedule increases under postal labor contracts. These costs are not covered by normal employee/employer contributions to the retirement fund. The 1985 Reconciliation Act shifted responsibility for paying health benefit costs of Postal annuitants retiring after 1986 from OPM to the Postal Service. The 1987 Reconciliation Act had Postal Service make one-time payments to defray annuitant health benefit costs in 1988 and 1989 and retirement COLA costs in 1988. (Retirement COLAs, like wage schedule increases, result in retirement liabilities not covered by normal retirement fund contributions.) Under the 1989 Reconciliation Act, Postal Service assumed responsibility for paying health benefits of survivors of post-86 annuitants and unfunded retirement COLA liabilities for post-86 annuitants.

The 1991 Budget proposals would continue moving Postal Service toward total self-sufficiency by having it assume responsibility for additional annuitant costs. Legislation will be proposed to cap the Federal government's potential liability for postal retiree benefits. Postal Service retirement contributions for current employees participating in CSRS would increase from 7 percent of basic salary costs to 11.67 percent in 1991 and 14 percent in 1994. This proposal would 1) reduce the growth in the retirement fund's unfunded liability and 2) shift costs of current postal employees from future to current ratepayers.

A second proposal would shift responsibility for paying health benefit costs for postal annuitants who retired between June 30, 1971 and September 30, 1986 and their survivors from OPM to Postal Service.

This appropriation is a Federal subsidy to the rail industry pension for costs not financed by the railroad sector. The American taxpayer subsidy annually exceeds $1,000 per rail employee.

Subsidy for windfall payments.—When first authorized in 1974, the windfall subsidy appropriation was estimated at $250 million annually for 25 years, or a total subsidy of $6.25 billion. In two years, the annual windfall subsidy estimate increased by 45 percent and, within five years, the Railroad Retirement Board reported that the original 1974 estimate had doubled to $500 million and would continue to increase if there were any inflation after 1980.

The Carter administration, faced with increasingly large projected subsidy costs, sought to limit to $350 million annually the general taxpayers' liability to subsidize this rail industry pension, a position also reflected in the March revisions to the 1982 budget. Based on their collectively-bargained agreement and assuming a $350 million subsidy appropriation, rail labor and management successfully sought congressional restructuring of the rail industry windfall in Public Law 97–35. The rail sector sought to limit windfall payments to the appropriated subsidy amounts rather than rely on the rail industry funded retirement account. This extended the subsidy well beyond the year 2000.

The rail sector has used the windfall subsidy to shift some of the financing of non-windfall rail pensions onto American taxpayers. Under current law, the industry-financed component is reduced by 25 percent of the windfall benefit payable to a retiree. If the rail sector financed windfall benefits, the cost would therefore be only 75% of the calculated windfall benefit. American taxpayers, however, have paid for 100% of calculated windfall costs. The budget proposes (in appropriations language and authorizing legislation) to limit the general fund subsidy to the windfall costs that the rail sector would otherwise incur (i.e., 75% of the calculated windfall benefit). Rail retirees will continue to get the same windfall benefits, with a portion financed from rail sector contributions.

The Board administers a separate fund for unemployment and sickness insurance payments. Administrative expenses are financed from employer unemployment taxes.

Maintenance of rail earnings accounts.—Unemployment and sickness payments are based on individual records of rail earnings and daily wage rates.

Processing of rail unemployment insurance claims.—Claims for unemployment compensation are filed with employers and certified for payment through the headquarters office. Unemployment claims are projected to decline by 84 percent from 1983 to 1991, resulting in a proportionate reduction in workloads and staffing requirements. The budget proposes to increase unemployment and sickness insurance administrative resources above the levels justified by declining workloads to enhance the prevention and detection of waste, fraud, and abuse and to implement recently enacted unemployment and sickness insurance amendments.

Rail claimant placement services.—The Board conducts an employment service for unemployment benefit claimants.

Administration.—The costs of administration are shared between this and the rail pension program on an allocated basis, which is periodically revised for actual experience.

Railroad retirees generally receive the equivalent to a social security benefit and a rail industry pension collectively bargained like other private pension plans but embedded in Federal law. About 245,000 individuals also receive a "windfall" benefit.

Income.—Railroad industry pension fund revenues are derived from pension contributions by railroad employers and employees; interest on investments; various temporary subsidies; and payments from the Federal old-age, survivors and disability insurance trust funds. The railroad retirement system has an annual financial interchange with social security. Under this arrangement, social security paid railroad retirement some $33 billion, with annual payments nearing $3 billion. It was designed by the rail sector to help finance the rail industry pension, placing social security in the same position in which it would have been if railroad employment had been directly covered by social security.

Retirement, disability, and survivor benefit payments.—Estimates reflect the increases in benefit rates provided by law.

Administrative expenses.—These expenses are subject to annual limitations in appropriation acts (see Limitation on Administration and Limitation on Review Activity).

These proposals would: (1) alter the cost-of-living adjustment formula for rail industry pensions; (2) freeze cost-of-living adjustments on rail pensions for one year; (3) limit the number of railroad retirement benefits available to married couples who both worked for railroads to two benefit payments per couple; and (4) require the rail industry to fully fund rail pensions by eliminating the current oversubsidization of windfall benefits.

Note.—The FY 1990 limitation reflects a 1.4 percent reduction pursuant to P.L. 99-177.

Maintenance of rail earnings accounts.—Eligibility for retirement and the amount of rail benefits paid are based on individual rail earnings records.

Processing rail applications.—This activity includes processing annuity claims under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974. Based on amendments enacted in Public Law 97-35, benefit computations were simplified. Coupled with the continued decline in railroad retirement applications and automation of previously manual procedures, the Board's workload devoted to this activity is expected to decrease each year. The table below shows the continued decline anticipated in major workloads.

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Pending, start of year	24,358	24,912	23,912

Total dispositions (excluding partial awards)	88,188	92,000	90,000
Pending, end of year	24,912	23,912	21,912

Maintenance of rail beneficiary rolls.—The Board will explore and adopt new approaches to improve service to beneficiaries.

As shown below, the Board projects this workload will continue to decline, as the number of beneficiaries on the rolls continues to decline.

	1989 actual	1990 est.	1991 est.
Total beneficiaries	903,502	888,000	873,000

Medicare.—This activity includes on a reimbursable basis processing applications for the Social Security and Health Care Financing Administrations of the Department of Health and Human Services to establish eligibility for health and medical insurance benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act for rail beneficiaries.

Administration.—The cost of administration is shared between the rail pension, social security, and the railroad unemployment insurance programs.

In recognition of the continuing decline in virtually all its major workloads, the Board will explore and adopt new approaches to improve service to beneficiaries.

In addition to rail social security, rail industry pensions and special windfalls, the Railroad Retirement Board pays supplemental annuities to rail workers retiring at age 60 with 30 years of creditable rail service or at age 65 with 25–29 years of creditable service. Monthly benefit amounts are calculated from a base of $23, adding $4 for every year of service over 25, up to a maximum monthly benefit of $43. Employers finance benefits on a pay-as-you-go basis by a cents-per-hour tax, currently established at 26 cents per hour.

All railroad retirees receive the equivalent of a social security benefit, and they may also receive other add-ons including rail industry pension payments, windfall payments, and supplemental annuities. Social security benefits for former railroad employees are funded by the social security trust funds, and rail industry pension payments are the responsibility of the rail sector. The combination of both these payments in a single trust fund gave rise to serious concerns that social security payments to railroad retirees might be jeopardized by the continuing financial problems of the rail industry pension fund. To ensure and protect the integrity of social security benefits to railroad retirees, the Railroad Retirement Solvency Act of 1983 mandated that beginning in 1985, the financing and payment of Federal social security benefits be separated from the rail industry pension trust fund.

NOTES

Administrative expenses are derived from preliminary calendar year 1990 estimates provided by the RTC to the Oversight Board.

Estimates of assets purchased and sold, and advances made and repaid, are based on transactions through November 1989. Prospectively, the budget estimates include purchases and recoveries of only those assets which are likely to be sold rapidly (within 90 days). Extraordinary RTC "bridge financing" requirements have not been included, as discussed in Section III, Part II of the budget.

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act (FIRREA), enacted in August 1989, established the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) to dispose of currently insolvent thrift institutions and those that may become insolvent during the three-year period subsequent to FIRREA's passage. The agency is managed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), whose Board serves as the RTC Board. In addition, FIRREA established the RTC Oversight Board to provide the RTC with general policy direction and to review its performance. The Oversight Board includes the Secretary of the Treasury (who serves as Chairperson), the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, and two other members appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Sources of funds for the RTC include income and sale proceeds from assets acquired during the course of resolving thrift cases, $18.8 billion in appropriated funds, and $31.2 billion from the sale of capital certificates to the Resolution Funding Corporation (REFCORP), a privately capitalized financing entity also established by FIRREA. Of the $31.2 billion, $1.2 billion was contributed by the Federal Home Loan Banks through REFCORP to the RTC in 1989. The remaining $30.0 billion will be raised through the issuance of long-term debt securities by REFCORP. The RTC may also issue notes and make guarantees up to certain statutory limits based on the value of RTC assets and the amount of funds contributed by REFCORP. Expenses of the Oversight Board will also be paid out of funds available to the RTC.

The RTC will terminate by December 31, 1996. All assets and liabilities of the RTC will be transferred to the FSLIC Resolution Fund, managed by the FDIC. The FSLIC Resolution Fund thereafter will pay any net proceeds from the sale of assets to REFCORP for meeting bond interest payments.

In 1990, the Securities and Exchange Commission will collect $22,916,000 from a temporary increase in the securities registration fee which is to be counted as offsetting receipts. Legislation will be proposed to make this rate increase permanent in 1991. Legislation will also be proposed to raise the fee on securities transactions; extend the transaction fee to over-the-counter securities qualified for trading in a national market system; and raise the fees on merger and proxy filings. These fee increases would generate $80,179,000 in governmental receipts in 1991.

The budget provides a 15 percent increase in the SEC budget to ensure adequate enforcement of the securities laws and oversight of securities markets. The primary purpose of the Commission is to protect the interests of the investing public.

Full disclosure.—To insure that investors will be provided with material facts concerning securities offered for public sale, issuers who propose to offer new securities for public sale are required to file registration statements with the Commission at its home or regional offices. Issuers conducting such offerings, as well as issuers having total assets and security-holder populations of specified sizes, are also required to furnish comparable information on a continuing basis in annual and other periodic reports and in proxy and tender offer materials. Commission staff review these filings to insure full and fair disclosure in order to provide investors with adequate information for decision-making and to prevent fraud and misrepresentation.

Electronic filing project (EDGAR).—In 1984, the SEC began a pilot project that has successfully tested the feasibility of receiving, analyzing and disseminating full disclosure filings electronically. Through the end of 1989, the pilot has received approximately 63,000 filings electronically.

In early 1989, the SEC selected a contractor to develop an operational system. The operational system will provide the Commission with a capability for electronic receipt, analysis, and dissemination of most of the full disclosure filings currently filed in paper. Transition from the pilot to the operational system will occur during 1991. The operational contract is for eight years with a $12.6 million requirement in fiscal 1991.

In 1991, the Selective Service System will continue to register men as they reach age 18, conduct a non-registrant identification program to insure compliance with the law, and maintain a data base of registrant records. The System will continue to enhance its capability to respond rapidly and efficiently from its standby posture.

Mobilization readiness remains one of the System's major objectives. Activities in support of this objective include all facets of National and Regional operational planning, maintenance of automated registration information, a comprehensive training program for the Selective Service Reserve Forces, a training program for the standby board members, and administrative functions. The processing procedures of the Registrant Information Management System will continue to be tested and refined to insure that it can fully satisfy the emergency manpower needs of the Armed Forces.

Reserve and National Guard officers are trained for mobilization assignments in specific positions with the Selective Service System. A special focus of the program is on the exercise of the mobilization plans to ensure a high readiness capability in the event of mobilization.

The Military Selective Service Act, section 10(h), as amended by section 715, Public Law 100-180, approved December 4, 1987, requires the Selective Service System to develop a system for the delivery of health care personnel to the armed forces in a national emergency. The first of four planned development phases of this system began in January 1988. Phase I, consisting of a needs analysis and plan of action; and Phase II, consisting of a concept of operations, a detailed study of the policies and procedures related to the induction of health care personnel, and the identification of the functional ADP requirements, have been completed. Phase III, consisting of the development of an ADP system, is expected to be completed in fiscal year 1990. Phase IV, consisting of testing, evaluation, and program refinement, should be completed during fiscal year 1991.

In 1991, registration improvement activities will include emphasis on urban areas where registration shortfalls are the greatest. Public awareness and enhanced compliance efforts, Federal and State legislation requiring registration for employment, and student financial assistance all contribute toward improved compliance with the law.

The Smithsonian Institution conducts research in the natural and physical sciences and in the history of cultures, technology, and the arts; acquires and preserves for reference and study purposes over one hundred million items of scientific, cultural, and historic importance; maintains public exhibits representative of the arts, American history, aeronautics and astronautics, technology, anthropology, geology, and biology (including living animal exhibits); presents performances of American arts and crafts; undertakes education programs at all levels; and participates in the exchange of scholarly information.

The Institution is responsible for the operation and maintenance of 14 major exhibition buildings; a zoological park and animal conservation and research center; the Museum Support Center and other collections storage and preservation facilities at Silver Hill, MD; two natural preserves, in Panama and on the Chesapeake Bay; an astrophysical observatory on Mount Hopkins, AZ; and supporting administrative, laboratory, and storage areas. Visitor attendance to buildings on and off the Mall, including the National Zoological Park, is expected to total approximately 30 million in 1990. Millions more will view traveling exhibitions.

Funding provided in 1990 and requested in 1991 will support the establishment of a new National Museum of the American Indian. Pursuant to Public Law 101–185, the Smithsonian will assume responsibility for the care and custody of the collection of Indian artifacts of the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, under the terms of the agreement between the Smithsonian and the Heye Foundation signed on May 8, 1989. This extraordinary collection, including one million Indian artifacts from all parts of the Western hemisphere, a 40,000-volume library and an 86,000-item archives, will form the basis of the new museum.

The 1991 request also will expand the Institution's research programs in the critical area of global environmental change and continue the development of a wide range of programs to commemorate the international observance of the 500th anniversary of the voyages of Christopher Columbus to the New World (to be held in 1992). In addition, the 1991 request includes funding to cover increases in uncontrollable costs, including utilities.

The objectives of the Woodrow Wilson Center are to produce scholarship of the highest quality on subjects that matter to our civilization and to communicate that scholarship to a wider audience within and beyond Washington through publication and dialog.

The Center has chosen to fulfill these objectives through its fellowship and guest scholar program. Each year the Center conducts a major open international competition for a limited number of fellowships. The scholars and the scholarly work they produce constitute the memorial to Woodrow Wilson. Virtually all of the Center's expenditures derive from the basic decision to create a resident body of fellows.

The Center is directed by its congressional statute to raise both public and private funds, and the Center's major objectives could not be attained by an exclusive reliance on either Federal appropriation or private contribution.

The Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) was created in 1933 as a Government-owned corporation for the unified development of a river basin comprised of parts of seven States. Its program in 1989 will be financed from three sources: (1) appropriations by the Congress; (2) proceeds available from current power operations and borrowings against future power revenues; and (3) proceeds available from nonpower activities.

The following table provides detailed information on programs financed by power proceeds and borrowings and programs financed by appropriations and nonpower proceeds.

Budget program—natural resources.—TVA concentrates its efforts on programs in navigation, flood control, dam safety, and maintenance of the waterway.

Water resources.—Includes operation and continuing development of the navigation channel from Paducah, KY, to Knoxville, TN.

For flood control, TVA operates a system of multipurpose reservoirs to retain excessive seasonal runoff and regulate discharges at flow rates that can be accommodated by downstream channels and reservoirs. As a result, flood crests are reduced along the Tennessee River and its tributaries and also the lower Ohio and Mississippi Rivers.

Dam safety modifications and maintenance activities ensure that the waterway system meets Federal safety guidelines in the event of severe flood conditions and maintenance is performed to keep the system in good and safe operating condition.

Land and forest resources.—This program consists of operation of dewatering areas associated with TVA's reservoir system.

Resource management.—The program contains two major areas of effort: Protection of public lands and waters under TVA trust; and valley mapping in support of TVA activities as well as the regional mapping needs of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Land Between The Lakes.—Work will continue on the development on this 170,000-acre area in Western Kentucky and Tennessee situated between TVA's Kentucky Reservoir and the Corps of Engineers' Barkley Reservoir.

National fertilizer development.—The National Fertilizer Development Center in Muscle Shoals, AL, is active in two program areas: Research and development and technology development.

Research and development consists of basic chemical and agronomic research and development of fertilizer products and processes. This is accomplished in cooperation with the Department of Agriculture, the land-grant universities, and industry.

Technology development is conducted with the land-grant universities and the fertilizer industry. It includes small-plot demonstrations, tests and demonstrations of fertilizer materials and practices on selected operating farms.

Power program: Power supply and use.—TVA is the sole supplier of electric power to an area of 80,000 square miles in the seven Tennessee Valley States. Income from power operations, net of interest charges and depreciation, and other operating expenses is estimated at $634,000 thousand in 1991.

The power generating facilities presented in the capital investment table are financed from power proceeds and borrowings.

General services.—Operating costs for general service activities include bridge maintenance, fallout shelter maintenance, and reimbursable services furnished at the request and expense of other agencies.

Financing.—Amounts estimated to become available in 1991 are to be derived from (1) the requested appropriation of $91,302 thousand; (2) nonpower revenues and receipts of $44,283 thousand; and (3) power revenues and receipts of $5,443,900 thousand. A summary of the application of appropriations follows:

Operating results and financial conditions.—Only the power program and fertilizer introduction are intended to be self-supporting; the net expense of nonpower programs is covered largely by appropriation funding. Payments to the Treasury from power proceeds in 1991 are estimated at $85,500 thousand—$65,500 thousand as a dividend (return on the appropriation investment in the power program) and $20,000 thousand as a reduction in the appropriation investment in the power program. Outstanding borrowings for the power program are expected to decrease by $2,240,000 thousand during 1991.

Total assets are estimated to decrease by $1,620,592 thousand during 1991. Power program assets are estimated to decrease by $1,635,712 thousand. This is offset by an increase of $15,120 thousand in nonpower programs. The estimate of liabilities at September 30, 1991, is $2,189,258 thousand less than the estimate at September 30, 1990. Total Government equity at September 30, 1991, is estimated to be $568,666 thousand greater than that at September 1990. This change includes the requested appropriation for 1991 and the net income from power operations, less payments to the Treasury and the net expense of nonpower programs.

The United States Information Agency conducts the international communication, educational, cultural and exchange programs of the United States. The Agency advises the President, the National Security Council, and the Secretary of State on the above areas, and assists in the development and execution of a national policy on international communications.

Agency operations are largely financed from this appropriation and consist of the following major elements:

Overseas missions.—The Agency currently operates 204 posts in 127 countries. These posts administer the exchange-of-persons program and conduct informational and other cultural programs using materials prepared locally and by the media services in Washington.

Voice of America.—This activity produces radio broadcasts in English and in 39 languages. Programs are broadcast from transmitters at 3 domestic and 13 overseas locations.

Educational and cultural affairs.—This activity covers the staff that administers educational and cultural exchanges between the United States and over 140 countries. It also provides program and support costs for the President's International Youth Exchange program, American-sponsored schools abroad, binational centers, U.S.-operated libraries and reading rooms abroad and other educational and cultural activities. Grant costs for Academic and Visitor Exchanges, and the Humphrey Fellowship, Private Sector, and Congress-Bundestag exchange programs are funded separately in the Educational and Cultural Exchanges account.

Program coordination, production, and support.—This activity serves primarily to support overseas missions by coordinating program planning and by producing, acquiring, and adapting various program materials for their use.

Television and film service.—This Service acquires and produces programs for distribution overseas and for direct telecasts via satellite.

Administrative support.—This activity funds the costs of administrative requirements for the activities discussed above.

Agency direction and management.—This activity encompasses managerial staffs and centralized servicing functions for the Agency as a whole.

Funds are also requested for U.S. participation in the Columbus Quincentennial Expositions in Seville, Spain and Genoa, Italy in 1992.

This appropriation provides funding for the conduct of audits and investigations relating to the programs and operations of the agency. Audits and investigations are responsible for providing leadership, coordination and policy recommendations to promote economy, efficiency and effectiveness and to identify and correct management and administrative deficiencies which create conditions for existing or potential instances of fraud, waste and mismanagement. The audits function provides internal audit services, program evaluation, and contract audit services. The investigation function provides for the detection and investigation of improper and illegal activities involving agency personnel, programs, and operations. This appropriation also provides funding for inspection services for domestic and overseas operations. For 1991, the Agency is proposing that an additional 5 positions be provided to the Office, primarily to reduce the backlog of cases in investigations.

An appropriation, together with the balances available from prior years, was formerly used for payment of local program expenses in U.S.-owned foreign currencies in those countries where the Department of the Treasury had determined that the supply of such currencies was in excess to the normal requirements of the U.S. Government. Since 1986, new appropriations for these payments in excess of available balances have been budgeted for in the Salaries and expenses account.

The Voice of America's Radio Marti Program was created by the Radio Broadcasting to Cuba Act (Public Law 98-111). Its programs are broadcast from studios in Washington, DC, via a transmitter at Marathon Key, Florida.

The objectives of the Radio Marti Program are: (1) to support the right of the people of Cuba to seek, receive, and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers; (2) to be effective in furthering the open communication of information and ideas through use of radio broadcasting to Cuba; (3) to serve as a consistently reliable and authoritative source of accurate, objective, and comprehensive news; and (4) to function in accordance with all Voice of America standards, and to broadcast programs which present a variety of views.

Program operations.—These funds are for personnel compensation, research, transmission costs, and other programming requirements. Radio Marti began 24-hour operation in March 1989 when the Marathon transmitter facility update was completed. Plans for 1991 include live newscasts around the clock, up from 18 hours per day, to ensure that the people of Cuba are made aware of important, fast-breaking developments.

Acquisition and construction of facilities.—To ensure that Radio Marti would continue to reach the people of Cuba should Cuban jamming of its broadcasts on 1180 kHz increase significantly, an alternate frequency is needed. The 1991 estimate includes funds to purchase a backup frequency and land on which to build a transmitting station.

The United States Railway Association (USRA) was created as a temporary agency in 1973 to oversee the formation of Conrail, monitor its performance, and act as a conduit for Federal assistance. These activities have been completed and, pursuant to the Conrail Privatization Act, USRA was abolished on April 1, 1987. Unobligated balances of this account were withdrawn in 1989.

Two other USRA accounts, Payments for Purchase of Conrail Securities and Regional Rail Reorganization Program, have been transferred to the Department of Transportation and are shown under the Federal Railroad Administration.

The United States Sentencing Commission was established pursuant to provisions of the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-473, Title II). The purposes of the Commission are to establish sentencing guidelines for the United States district courts and other sentencing policies and practices for the Federal criminal justice system. The Commission is also charged with developing means of measuring the degree to which the sentencing, penal, and correctional practices are effective in meeting the purposes of sentencing as set forth in new section 3553(a)(2) of Title 18, United States Code, by section 212(a) of the Act.

This includes a broad spectrum of research related to prison impact, recidivism, deterrence, alternative sentencing, and many other areas. The Commission has specific responsibilities to: develop and maintain a comprehensive data base in order to analyze court application of the guidelines; evaluate the effects of guideline implementation in meeting statutory goals; develop training programs and provide assistance to probation officers and others in the criminal justice system on the application of sentencing guidelines. Various other criminal statutes, such as the Omnibus Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 (Public Law 100-690), contain provisions which the Commission must implement.

The Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) is a non-Federal agency established pursuant to an interstate compact among Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia. The Authority's primary functions are to plan, develop, finance, and construct the Metrorail rapid transit system and to operate the bus/rail transit system in the National Capital area. The rail system extends from the District of Columbia into the participating jurisdictions of Maryland and Virginia.

This WMATA account provides the annual Federal share (two-thirds) of interest payments on outstanding WMATA bonds sold in support of the rail construction program. The WMATA bonds, totaling $997 million, are guaranteed by the Federal Government and become due beginning in the year 2012. In September 1979, WMATA and the Department of Transportation approved an Initial Bond Repayment Participation Agreement providing for an overall two-thirds Federal and one-third local sharing of the interest and principal costs of the bonds. In August 1982, this agreement was reaffirmed in a supplement to the agreement.

PROPOSED SUPPLEMENTALS

EXPLANATION OF REQUESTS

This subpart contains supplemental appropriations requests for 1990 being proposed for congressional consideration in this budget. Requests for supplemental appropriations are usually made after enactment of regular appropriations.

PROPOSED SUPPLEMENTAL REQUESTS

The supplemental requests below are grouped as "program" supplementals and "pay" supplementals and are shown as separate sections.

Supplementals proposed in this budget for various program purposes are included in the first grouping. The presentation usually includes suggested appropriation language, the related budget schedules, and narrative explanations of the requests.

Requests for pay supplementals follow in the form of suggested appropriations language. The amounts contained in the appropriations language for pay also appear as separate line entries in the regular program and financing schedules for the related account in the "Detailed Budget Estimates by Agency" in part V of section two.

DETAILS OF PROPOSED SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR THE FISCAL YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1990

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to supply supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990 and for other purposes; namely:

PROPOSED SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS FOR VARIOUS PROGRAMS (EXCLUDING REQUESTS FOR INCREASED PAY COSTS)

The Judiciary

COURTS OF APPEALS, DISTRICT COURTS AND OTHER JUDICIAL SERVICES

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

(Supplemental now requested, existing legislation)

For an additional amount for "Salaries and expenses", $22,750,000.

This supplemental request would provide funds to make up the shortfall in funds collected from fees in fiscal year 1990.

Department of Agriculture

FOOD AND NUTRITION SERVICE

FOOD STAMP PROGRAM

(Appropriations language now requested, existing legislation)

For making benefit payments to individuals under the Food Stamp Act, for unanticipated costs incurred for the current fiscal year, such sums as may be necessary.

This proposal would give the Department of Agriculture indefinite spending authority beyond the fiscal year 1990 appropriated amounts if such spending were necessary to sustain benefits through the end of the fiscal year.

Department of Education

OFFICE OF POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION

Student Financial Assistance

(Appropriations language now requested, existing legislation)

The amount made available for the 1990–91 award year under this heading in the Department of Education Appropriations Act, 1990, for subpart 1 of part A of title IV of the Higher Education Act, as amended, shall be available first to meet any insufficiencies resulting from the payment schedule for Pell grants published by the Secretary of Education for the 1989–90 award year.

This language would allow use of 1990 appropriations to finance 1989 Pell grant costs that exceed 1989 appropriation availability. The current estimate of the 1989-90 award year funding shortfall is $265 million. This amount is in addition to the $131 million already appropriated for this purpose in 1990.

Similar language in subpart A for 1991 would allow use of 1991 funds to pay for unfunded fiscal year 1990 costs. Funds to retire the cumulative funding shortfall are included in the 1991 Pell request.

Higher Education

(Appropriations language now requested, existing legislation)

Of the funds provided in Public Law 101–166 for part C of title III of the Higher Education Act, as amended, $5,000,000 shall be made available solely for historically black colleges and universities eligible for participation in programs under part B of said title of said Act.

For 1990, the Budget proposed an increase for part C of title III of the Higher Education Act to increase endowment matching grants for historically black colleges and universities. The 1990 appropriation act included an increase but did not specify the recipients of the funds. This language would assure that the increase would be available only for historically black colleges and universities.

Department of Health and Human Services

FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION

Salaries and Expenses

(Appropriations language now requested, existing legislation)

The Secretary of Health and Human Services is authorized to charge fees to applicants for and holders of approved applications, including pending applications, under section 505(j) of the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, for fiscal year 1990, for federal costs associated with review of applications under such section. All such fees collected shall be credited to this account, and shall remain available for the costs of such activities, without fiscal year limitation and in the amounts provided in advance in appropriations acts. The Secretary shall determine the amounts of such fees and publish a schedule of fees which shall be effective upon publication, notwithstanding 5 U.S.C. 553.

For fiscal year 1990, from such fees collected, $13,900,000 shall be available for the cost of review of abbreviated applications pursuant to section 505(j), and for surveillance and testing of drugs marketed pursuant to approved applications under section 505(j).

Department of Justice

GENERAL LEGAL ACTIVITIES

Salaries and Expenses, General Legal Activities

(Appropriations language now requested, existing legislation)

Under this heading in the Department of Justice Appropriations Act, 1990, delete "$1,000,000" and substitute $1,500,000.

This language change would make funds from the Vaccine Compensation Trust Fund available to the Department of Justice at the level authorized in the Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989.

FEDERAL PRISON SYSTEM

Buildings and Facilities

(Appropriations language now requested, existing legislation)

The appropriation language under this heading in the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990, is amended by adding the following: Deposits transferred from the Assets Forfeiture Fund to the Buildings and Facilities account of the Federal Prison System in 1989 may be used for the construction of correctional institutions, and the construction, renovation and repair of Immigration and Naturalization Service and U.S. Marshals Service detention facilities.

The Attorney General is authorized to transfer the excess proceeds of the Assets Forfeiture Fund to the Bureau of Prisons to pay for the construction of correctional institutions. (28 USC 524(c)(1)(H), as amended by the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988.) This proposed supplemental language change would make these funds available for the construction of detention cells operated by the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and for the renovation of holding cells run by the U.S. Marshals Service.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

(General provision language now requested, existing legislation)

Sec. 205. The pilot debt collection project authorized by Public Law 99–578 is extended through September 30, 1992.

The Attorney General is authorized by The Federal Debt Recovery Act of 1986 (FDRA—Public Law 99–578, 31 U.S.C. Sec. 3718(b)) to run a pilot project for three years to test the effectiveness of contracting with debt collection lawyers in the private sector to assist with the collection of delinquent Federal debt. The FDRA authorizes the pilot project only through August 31, 1990, after which the program is due to terminate. This supplemental language change would extend the pilot project through September 30, 1992. The extension is necessary due to unforeseen problems which arose in the process of letting the contracts to run the pilot project, including the successful defense of a protest before the General Services Administration Board of Contract Appeals. As a result of these delays, the Department of Justice was unable to get the project operational in the first five pilot districts until September 1989. Extending the program until September 30, 1992 would provide the necessary time to judge the program's effectiveness.

Department of State

Administration of Foreign Affairs

Emergencies in the Diplomatic and Consular Service

(Appropriation language now requested, existing legislation)

For meeting unforeseen emergencies that may arise in fiscal year 1990, the Secretary of State may transfer up to $3,000,000 from the Salaries and Expenses appropriation to this heading.

This proposal would allow the Secretary of State to transfer funds to the Emergencies in the Diplomatic and Consular Service account to cover the costs of unforeseen evacuations and other emergencies.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF STATE

(General provision language now requested, existing legislation)

Section 614 of the Department of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990, is hereby repealed: funds appropriated in said Act for the Department of State and the United States Information Agency are hereby made available for obligation and expenditure, notwithstanding section 15 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956 and section 701 of the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948.

This proposal would repeal section 614 of Public Law 101-162 which limits the amounts available for obligation and expenditure by the Department of State and the United States Information Agency to a rate not exceeding the rate available for fiscal year 1989 or the rate provided in H.R. 2991 as passed by the Senate, whichever is lower. The effect of this proposal is reflected in the schedules of the affected accounts in Part I.

Other Independent Agencies

This proposal would provide funds for monitoring and evaluation staffs to concurrently develop the data collection and compilation system needed to monitor compliance with the sentencing guidelines, to analyze these statistics to best serve the needs of the Congress, the Commission and the criminal justice community, and to process the burgeoning accumulation of cases since the Supreme Court decision validating the Commission's guidelines. In addition, a small increase in legal staff is required to monitor and analyze the court decisions related to appeals of sentencing guidelines cases and to take appropriate action to support the guidelines.

TITLE VI—GENERAL PROVISIONS

(General provision language now requested, existing legislation)

Section 605 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990, is amended by adding the following provision at the end thereof: Provided further, that fees made available to the Commission and the Department herein shall remain available until expended.

The 1990 appropriations act for the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission established a filing fee for Hart-Scott-Rodino pre-merger reviews. Each account's appropriation was reduced $15 million below the President's request with the expectation that the difference would be made up by receipts from the new fee. This proposed supplemental language change would make the fees available until expended. This is necessary so that fees collected late in the fiscal year will not expire before the agencies are able to obligate them.

INCREASED PAY COSTS FOR THE FISCAL YEAR 1990

For additional amounts for appropriations for the fiscal year 1990, for increased pay costs authorized by or pursuant to law as follows:

THE JUDICIARY

Supreme Court of the United States:
"Salaries and expenses", $63,000;
Courts of Appeals, District Courts and other Judicial Services:
"Salaries and expenses", $5,253,000.

NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION

"Research and program management" $32,970,000 to be derived by transfer from "Construction of facilities".

Note.—As this Budget goes to press, additional supplementals for Panama and for refugees are under consideration. It is likely that decisions on these will be made at a time very close to the presentation of the Budget. Due to printing deadlines, they are not reflected in this Budget.

OTHER MATERIALS

EXPLANATION OF OTHER MATERIALS

This section includes the following material:

(a) A list of advance appropriations, as required by the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (31 U.S.C. 1105(a)(17)), a list of appropriations with advance funding provisions, and a list of appropriations with forward funding provisions.

(b) A statement of amendments and revisions, if any, to 1990 budget authority requests that were transmitted to the Congress after the 1990 Budget but prior to the transmittal of the 1991 Budget, as required by section 601 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

NOTE.—This section previously included information on the amounts of appropriations requested for the Offices of Inspectors General for Federal departments and establishments, as required by section 3 of the Federal Managers' Financial Integrity Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-255). Pursuant to the Inspectors General Act Amendments of 1988, separate appropriations accounts are proposed for each Office of Inspector General, and the information on appropriations and related financial information are now presented in separate account presentations in Part I of this document. See the index (under the general heading, "Inspectors General") for the location of each appropriation request.

ADVANCE APPROPRIATIONS, ADVANCE FUNDING, AND FORWARD FUNDING FOR 1991

I. An advance appropriation is one made to become available one fiscal year or more beyond the fiscal year for which the appropriation act is passed. Advance appropriations in fiscal year 1991 appropriations Acts will become available for programs in 1992 or beyond. Since these appropriations are not available until after fiscal year 1991, the amounts will not be included in fiscal year 1991 budget totals, but will be reflected in the budget totals for the fiscal year for which they are requested.

The Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (31 U.S.C. 1105(a)(17)) requires inclusion in the budget of "information on estimates of appropriations for the fiscal year following the fiscal year for which the budget is submitted for grants, contracts, and other payments under each program for which there is an authorization of appropriations for that following fiscal year when the appropriations are authorized to be included in an appropriation law for the fiscal year before the fiscal year in which the appropriation is to be available for obligation." In fulfillment of this requirement, the table below lists those accounts authorized to receive, in fiscal year 1991, advance appropriations for fiscal year 1992 and beyond and cites the authorizing statute. The listing is in two parts: Part A shows the amounts of advance appropriations included in the 1991 budget. Part B is a listing of accounts for which advance appropriations are authorized but not requested in the 1991 budget.

A. Accounts for which advance appropriations are included in the 1991 budget:
  - Department of Agriculture:
    - Farmers Home Administration Agriculture Credit Insurance Fund, $13,500 thousand for direct loans for 1991 (P.L. 101-161).

    - Strategic Petroleum Reserves Petroleum Account (P.L. 94-163), $90,860 thousand for 1991.

    - Health care for the homeless (P.L. 101-166), $11,885 thousand for 1991.
    - Grants to States for Medicaid (42 U.S.C., sec. 1396) $12,400,000 thousand for 1992.
    - Special benefits for disabled coal miners (30 U.S.C., sec. 921) $203,000 thousand for 1992.
    - Supplemental security income program (42 U.S.C., sec. 1381) $3,550,000 thousand for 1992.
    - Family support payments to States (42 U.S.C., secs. 601 and 651) $3,300,000 thousand for 1992.
    - Interim Assistance to States for Legalization (P.L. 99-603, sec. 204, and Title II of P.L. 101-166).
  - Department of Justice: Restitution payments for individuals of Japanese ancestry who were interned during World War II (P.L. 100-383), $500 thousand for 1991, $500 thousand for 1992, and $200 thousand for 1993.
  - Corporation for Public Broadcasting: Public broadcasting fund, $298,870 thousand for 1991 and $327,280 thousand for 1992.

  - National Aeronautics and Space Administration: Research and Development (Space Station Freedom), $2,907,000 thousand for 1992, and $3,031,000 thousand for 1993.

B. Accounts authorized to receive advance appropriations but for which none are requested in the 1991 budget:
  - Department of Agriculture:
    - Food program administration (42 U.S.C., sec. 1752).
    - Food donations program (Public Law 93-29, sec. 209).
    - Child nutrition programs (42 U.S.C., sec. 1752).
  - Department of Education. The following activities are authorized to receive advance appropriations (20 U.S.C. 1223 and 29 U.S.C. 703): [1]
    - Compensatory education for the disadvantaged.
    - Impact aid.
    - School improvement programs.
    - Indian education.
    - Bilingual education.
    - Immigrant and refugee education.
    - Education for the handicapped.
    - Special institutions for the handicapped.
    - Rehabilitation services and handicapped research.
    - Vocational and adult education.
    - Student financial assistance.
    - Guaranteed student loans.
    - Higher education.
    - Higher education facilities loans and insurance.
    - College housing and academic facilities loans.
    - Howard University.

- Research, statistics, and improvement of practice.
- Libraries.
- Education and research overseas (special foreign currency program).

Department of Health and Human Services:
- Payments to States for foster care and adoption assistance (Public Law 96-272).
- Human Development Services (Public Law 97-35, sec. 657, Public Law 89-73 as amended, sec. 209).

II. Advance funding is budget authority that is to be charged to the appropriation in the succeeding year but which authorizes obligations to be incurred in the last quarter of the fiscal year if necessary to meet higher than anticipated benefit payments in excess of the specific amount appropriated for the year. When such budget authority is used, an adjustment is made to increase the budget authority for the fiscal year in which it is used and to reduce the budget authority of the succeeding fiscal year. Essentially, this is a device for avoiding supplemental requests late in the fiscal year for certain programs, should the appropriations for the current year prove to be too low. The table below lists those accounts for which advance funding authority is requested in the 1991 budget.

Department of Labor:
- Special benefits.
- Black lung disability trust fund.
- Federal unemployment benefits and allowances.

Department of Veterans Affairs:
- Burial benefits and miscellaneous assistance.
- Readjustment benefits.
- Veterans insurance and indemnities.
- Loan guaranty revolving fund.

III. Forward funding is budget authority that is made available for obligation beginning in the last quarter of the fiscal year for the financing of ongoing grant programs of grantees during the next succeeding fiscal year. The budget authority for such programs is included in the budget totals for the year in which it is appropriated. This device is often used for education programs, so that grants can be made prior to the start of the school year. The language providing forward funding for education programs will specify that amounts appropriated will not be available until some time into the year of the appropriation (e.g., July 1, 1991) and in most cases will specify that such amounts will remain available until the end of the succeeding fiscal year. The table below lists those accounts for which forward funding exists or is requested in whole or in part in the 1991 budget.

Department of Education:
- Compensatory education for the disadvantaged.
- School improvement programs.
- Education for the handicapped.
- Vocational and adult education.
- Indian education.
- Student financial assistance.

In the training and employment area, forward funding provides appropriations for a program year that starts on July 1st of the fiscal year of the appropriation. Financing extends through June 30th of the following fiscal year. Program years are authorized for training programs under the Job Training Partnership Act, operation of the State Employment Service under section 6 of the Wagner-Peyser Act, and senior citizen employment programs under Title V of the Older Americans Act. The table below lists accounts for which forward funding is requested in the 1991 budget.

Department of Labor:
- Training and employment services.
- Community service employment for older Americans.
- State Unemployment Insurance and Employment Service Operations.

STATEMENT OF AMENDMENTS TO AND REVISIONS IN BUDGET AUTHORITY FOR 1990

(Between the Transmittal of the 1990 and 1991 Budgets)

A statement of all amendments to or revisions in budget authority requested between transmittal of the 1990 budget and the 1991 budget is presented below. This statement is being included in the budget in accordance with the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (31 U.S.C. 1105(d)).

The modifications to requests for 1990 budget authority that were made through the course of the past year took three forms. If the Congress had not yet acted on a pending request, the President sent amendments to the budget requests transmitted in January 1989. If appropriations had been enacted, the President proposed either supplemental budget authority or rescission of enacted appropriations.

Amendments and requests for supplemental appropriations are printed in the documents of the House of Representatives and the Senate that are identified in part A of the following listing. The President's proposals for rescissions are included in special messages to the Congress under the Impoundment Control Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344). Both the special messages and monthly cumulative reports on the items they cover are printed in the Federal Register.

[1] These statutes erroneously refer to "advance funding". Since these statutes describe and clearly intend to provide advance appropriations, the affected accounts are listed here and not in section II.

There are no rescissions currently pending before the Congress.

GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED ENTERPRISES

This part contains descriptions of and data on the Government-sponsored enterprises listed below. These enterprises were established and chartered by the Federal Government. They are not included in the Federal budget because they are classified as being private. However, because of their relationship to the Government, detailed statements of financial operations and condition are presented, to the extent such information is available, on a basis that is as consistent as practicable with the basis for the budget data of Government agencies. These statements are not reviewed by the President; they are presented as submitted by the enterprises. The relationship of these enterprises to the Government is discussed further in Section One, Part VI.B, "Federal Underwriting Risks: Federal Credit and Government-sponsored Enterprises."

Financing.—Between 1974 and early 1982, Sallie Mae borrowed through the Federal Financing Bank. The Secretary of Education was authorized by the Education Amendments of 1980 to guarantee principal and interest on such obligations issued prior to October 1, 1985. Under an agreement with the Department of the Treasury reached in early 1981, Sallie Mae began borrowing directly in the private capital markets. Its last borrowing through the FFB and its last issuance of federally guaranteed obligations occurred in January 1982. Its obligations today have certain characteristics, provided by charter, which give them "agency" status, but they are not federally insured or guaranteed.

Management.—At its annual meeting in May 1989, the shareholders of Sallie Mae elected a board of directors to serve until May 1990. The shareholders of Sallie Mae are entitled to elect 14 members to the board. Pursuant to the Education Amendments of 1972, seven public directors are appointed by the President, who also names the chairman from among the 21 members.

As part of the 1991 Budget, legislation will be proposed that would impose on certain Government-sponsored enterprises a fee on new securities issued after September 30, 1990. The purpose of this fee is to reimburse the Federal Government for the borrowing advantages these enterprises enjoy as a result of their special relationship with the Government. As part of this proposal, Sallie Mae will be charged an annual fee on new securities issuances, defined as any increase above the level of Sallie Mae securities outstanding on September 30, 1990.

This fee will begin at .10 percent (10 basis points) in 1991, rising to .20 percent (20 basis points) in 1992, and .30 percent (30 basis points) in 1993 and beyond.

COLLEGE CONSTRUCTION LOAN INSURANCE ASSOCIATION

The College Construction Loan Insurance Association (Connie Lee) was authorized by Public Law 99-498 on October 17, 1986. The Corporation was created to insure and reinsure bonds and loans of educational institutions which borrow funds to finance the acquisition, construction or renovation of their facilities. The Association was incorporated in February 1987, under the District of Columbia Business Corporation Act.

Connie Lee's authorizing statute states that "no obligation which is insured, guaranteed, or otherwise backed by the corporation, shall be deemed to be an obligation which is guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the United States."

Operations.—Connie Lee is structured to operate as a private corporation, subject to the same state laws and regulations as any other insurance company. Accordingly, Connie Lee secures insurance licenses in each of the various states in which it expects to conduct its insurance activities.

The Board of Directors authorized management to begin activities as a reinsuror of educational facilities bonds in 1988. Connie Lee reinsured its first bonds in December 1988. In fiscal year 1989, Connie Lee provided reinsurance on bonds representing $1.5 billion dollars of debt service for more than 551 colleges, universities and teaching hospitals.

The forecast data contained in this material are based on certain general economic assumptions available in November 1989, and should not be construed as an official forecast of the Corporation's position.

Total	1,530,200	1,875,000	2,250,000

Financing.—In order to provide capitalization, the Secretary of Education, the Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae), and other investors are authorized to purchase stock in the corporation. Sallie Mae made an initial investment of $2 million in Connie Lee stock in fiscal year 1987. The Secretary of Education purchased $19.1 million in Connie Lee stock with funds appropriated for this purpose in fiscal year 1988. Subsequently, the corporation sold an additional $50.9 million of equity securities to Sallie Mae, increasing total capital of the corporation to $72.0 million. This action, coupled with the completion of a business plan and the necessary operational systems and staffing, resulted in the issuance of the triple A credit rating by Standard and Poor's needed by the corporation to engage in the financial guaranty reinsurance business.

In order to commence its activities as a direct insurer of educational facilities obligations, Connie Lee will obtain additional capital. Connie Lee projects that a total of $125 million in equity capital will be sufficient to secure the issuance of a triple A credit rating to engage in the direct insurance business.

The Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) is a Government-sponsored private corporation. Its purpose is to provide supplementary assistance to the secondary market for home mortgages by supplying a degree of liquidity for mortgage investments, thereby improving the distribution of investment capital available for home mortgage financing.

Fannie Mae purchases mortgages at market prices pursuant to commitments issued to sellers through a variety of programs. It finances these purchases through the issuance of debt securities. Fannie Mae's debt instruments are characterized as "Agency Issues" in the securities market, but not in the Federal Government's budget.

The common stock of the Corporation is owned by the public, is fully transferable and is listed on major stock exchanges.

The forecast data contained in this material has been developed based on certain general economic assumptions prevalent in November 1989 and should not be construed as an official forecast of the Corporation's position.

The Corporation has three separate authorities to borrow money from private sources. It may issue subordinated obligations. It may, in addition, borrow amounts not in excess of the sum of its defined capital and subordinated obligations outstanding multiplied by a factor established by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. This factor is currently set at 20. These borrowings usually take the form of debentures and short-term discount notes. Finally, Fannie Mae may issue bonds secured by mortgages. Such bonds may be guaranteed by the Government National Mortgage Association. There is no statutory limitation on the amount of such bonds that may be outstanding.

According to accounting practices for private corporations, the mortgages in the pools of loans supporting the mortgage-backed securities are considered to be owned by the holders of these securities. Consequently, on the books of the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), these mortgages are not considered assets and the securities outstanding are not considered liabilities. However, the concepts of the budget of the U.S. Government consider these mortgages and mortgage-backed securities to be assets and liabilities, respectively, of Fannie Mae. For the purposes of this document, therefore, they are presented as assets and liabilities in the accompanying schedules. On the schedule of Status of direct loans for mortgage-backed securities, the items labeled "New loans" and "Recoveries: Repayments and prepayments" are budgetary terms. However, from the Corporation's perspective, these items are "Amounts issued" and "Amounts passed through to the holders of securities", respectively.

The forecast data contained in this material has been developed based on certain general economic assumptions prevalent in November 1989 and should not be construed as an official forecast of the Corporation's position.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac) was created under the Emergency Home Finance Act of 1970. Congress chartered Freddie Mac to provide mortgage lenders with an organized national secondary market enabling them to manage their conventional mortgage portfolio more effectively and gain indirect access to a ready source of additional funds to meet new demands for mortgages. Freddie Mac serves as a conduit facilitating the flow of investment dollars from capital market investors to mortgage lenders and, ultimately, to homebuyers increasing the amount of mortgage credit and making it more affordable.

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA) significantly changed the corporate governance of Freddie Mac. The legislation, signed into law in August, 1989, abolished the Federal Home Loan Bank Board whose three members also serve as the Board of Directors for Freddie Mac. In its place, FIRREA authorized an 18 member Board of Directors for Freddie Mac, of which 5 are to be appointed by the President of the United States and the remaining 13 are to be elected by the stockholders of the corporation at the first annual meeting. This meeting is mandated by law to take place within six months of FIRREA's enactment. Freddie Mac's 60 million shares of non-voting, senior participating preferred stock were automatically converted by FIRREA to voting common stock. The common stock is listed on the New York and Pacific Stock Exchanges.

FIRREA also introduced into Freddie Mac's charter the following elaboration of the corporation's mission: "to provide stability in the secondary mortgage market for home mortgages; to respond appropriately to the private capital market; and to provide ongoing assistance to the secondary market for home mortgages (including mortgages securing homes for low- and moderate-income families involving a reasonable economic return to the corporation) by increasing the liquidity of mortgage investments and improving the distribution of investment capital available for home mortgage financing."

This legislative change enhances Freddie Mac's current ability to identify the needs of homeowners as well as the mortgage finance industry and develop appropriate mortgage purchase and securitization programs to meet those needs in a timely fashion.

These programs and security structures have helped Freddie Mac finance one in eight American homes and half a million apartment units at the lowest possible cost. Freddie Mac ensures that lenders throughout the country have equal access to the competitive benefits of the secondary market so that Freddie Mac's presence is felt in every area across the country.

Freddie Mac's role in developing a nationwide network for obtaining mortgage credit involved much more than linking capital rich areas to capital deficit areas. The corporation's mission to create more affordable mortgage credit throughout the country also required standardization and uniformity in the marketplace. Freddie Mac's underwriting guidelines, innovative mortgage programs and mortgage backed securities are the cornerstones to Freddie Mac's commitment to affordable housing.

This commitment is borne out by the corporation's current purchase statistics. Freddie Mac's average loan purchase in 1988 was $68,500, over 63 percent below Freddie Mac's maximum loan amount. In addition, approximately one-third of the new loans we purchased in 1988 were under $40,000. These loans are affordable to households making $16,000 per year.

The forecast data contained in this material represent estimates and should not be construed as an official forecast of the corporation's future position. The data have been developed on the basis of certain economic assumptions that are reviewed and revised periodically. Consequently, the estimates are subject to forecast error and will normally differ from actual data when these become available.

According to generally accepted accounting principles utilized for private corporations, the mortgages in the pools of loans supporting PCs are considered to be owned by the holder of these securities. Therefore, Freddie Mac does not show these mortgages as assets. However, the budget philosophy of the United States Government includes these mortgages and mortgages pass-through securities as assets and liabilities, respectively, of Freddie Mac. For the purpose of this document, therefore, they are presented as assets and liabilities in the accompanying schedules. On the Status of Direct Loans schedule for mortgage pass-through securities, the items labeled "Disbursements" and "Repayments" are budgetary terms. However, for Freddie Mac's perspective, these amounts represent "Sales of PCs" and "Amounts passed through to PC holders," respectively.

The 1991 Budget proposes legislation that would impose on certain Government-sponsored enterprises a fee on new securities issued after September 30, 1990. The purpose of this fee is to reimburse the Federal Government for the borrowing advantages these enterprises enjoy as a result of their special relationship with the Government. As part of this proposal, Freddie Mac will be charged an annual fee on new debt issued after September 30, 1990.

This fee will begin at .10 percent (10 basis points) in 1991, rising to .20 percent (20 basis points) in 1992, and .30 percent (30 basis points) in 1993 and beyond.

Pursuant to the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 11 of 13 banks for cooperatives voted in 1988 to merge into a single National Bank for Cooperatives. The bank for cooperatives in the Springfield and St. Paul districts voted to remain independent, but have nation-wide lending authority.

The banks for cooperatives lend to agriculture-related and rural utility cooperatives. As part of the Farm Credit System they are regulated by the Farm Credit Administration, an independent federal agency. The funds to finance loans are obtained primarily from sales of bonds to the public. The Farm Credit System bonds issued by the banks are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government either as to principal or interest.

The Farm Credit Act of 1955 provided for eventual ownership of the banks by farmers' cooperatives and the retirement of the U.S. Government's investment. This was accomplished on December 31, 1968, when the remainder of the U.S. Government capital was retired.

The banks for cooperatives presently operate under authorities contained in title III of the Farm Credit Act of 1971, Public Law 92–180, as amended.

The Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 required the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank (FICB) and Federal Land Bank (FLB) in each Farm Credit District to merge into a single Farm Credit Bank by July 6, 1988. No merger occurred in the Jackson District because the FLB is in receivership. The Farm Credit Banks operate under statutory authority which combines the prior authorities of the FLB and the FICB.

The 11 Farm Credit Banks are under the general supervision of the Farm Credit Administration, an independent federal agency. They serve as banks of discount for agriculture, discounting agricultural and livestock paper for, and making loans to local financing institutions such as production credit associations, agricultural credit corporations, livestock loan companies, and commercial banks. They make long-term real estate loans to farmers and ranchers, through local federal land bank associations. They also provide the production credit and federal land bank associations with necessary supervision and services.

The bank's lending funds are obtained primarily from the sale of Farm Credit System bonds to the public and from their own capital funds. The bonds are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government either as to principal or interest. All of their expenses are paid from their own income and are not included in the budget of the United States. Included in these expenses is the credit banks' share of costs of the Farm Credit Administration and insurance premiums paid to the Farm Credit Insurance Corporation. Farm Credit System Financial Assistance Corporation purchases of selected System institution's preferred stock, and payments for Capital Preservation Agreement cash-outs, as required by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, are reflected for 1989.

The banks were originally wholly owned Government corporations set up exclusively as banks of discount; however, pursuant to the Farm Credit Act of 1956, the banks became mixed-ownership corporations and were made responsible for supervising the production credit and federal land bank associations and assisting them to make sound credit available to farmers.

All the capital stock of the FICB's, from organization in 1923 to December 31, 1956, was held by the U.S. Government. The 1956 Act provided a long-range plan for the eventual ownership of the credit banks by the production credit associations and the gradual retirement of the Government's investment in the banks. This retirement was accomplished in full on December 31, 1968. The last of the Government capital that had been invested in the FLB's was repaid in 1947.

The Financial Assistance Corporation (FAC) was created by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 (the '87 Act) to provide funds to Farm Credit System (FCS) institutions experiencing financial difficulties. The board of the FCS Funding Corporation in New York City is also the board of the FAC. The FAC provides assistance mainly through the purchase of preferred stock in FCS institutions which have been certified by the FCS Assistance Board as eligible to receive assistance. Financial assistance can be provided for such purposes as facilitating a merger of System institutions, paying premiums associated with a System institution's restructuring of high-cost debt, and other purposes in cases when the book value of an institution's stock or other equities is less than par value.

The FAC also assumed approximately $415 million in payables from FCS Capital Preservation Agreements which accrued through the third quarter of 1986. Capital Preservation Agreements were an earlier form of FCS self-help, unrelated to the '87 Act. Cash-outs of these agreements occur as certain FCS institutions incur loan write-offs. To date, all $415 million in Capital Preservation payments to the FCS have been made by the FAC.

The FAC finances its stock purchases, Capital Preservation payments and the administrative expenses of the Assistance Board through the issuance of FAC debt obligations. Issuances are authorized up to $4 billion through September 1992 when the FAC's authority expires.

FAC debt obligations are backed by a full faith and credit guarantee of the United States Government. Except for debt issued for Capital Preservation cash-outs, the U.S. Treasury pays all the interest on 15-year, uncollateralized FAC obligations in the first five years after issuance, and half the interest expense in the second five years. The FCS is required to eventually reimburse Treasury for these payments, and will redeem FAC debt upon maturity or call. Interest and principal due on Capital Preservation debt issuances are paid by FCS Banks. Proceeds of FAC debt issuance are paid into, and amounts for assistance and other expenses are paid from, the FAC Assistance Fund.

Private ownership in FAC was achieved by a one-time mandatory purchase of FAC stock by FCS institutions in 1988. Proceeds from this purchase, totalling $177 million, were deposited in the FAC Trust Fund and are invested in Treasury securities. Amounts in the Trust Fund, and in the Farm Credit Insurance Fund (discussed elsewhere in this document) must be exhausted before a claim is made on the U.S. guarantee of FAC obligations.

Legislation amending the '87 Act was included in the 1989 Rural Development, Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriations Act. The provision required a partial rebate of principal amounts in the Trust Fund on October 1, 1989, based on the percentage of total authorized FAC debt outstanding at that time. This provision was found to alter the private FAC ownership requirement envisioned in the '87 Act sufficient to categorize the FAC as a federal entity. Subsequently, the 1989 Reconciliation Act delayed the effective date of the Trust Fund principal rebate to 1993, and provides for interim payments of interest earnings to FCS institutions on a portion of Trust Fund balances. Therefore, the FAC will be classified as a federal entity beginning in 1993.

Personnel Summary

Total number full-time permanent positions	9	25	40

Farmer Mac was created by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 (the Act) to facilitate a secondary market for farm and rural housing loans. It is intended to attract new capital (from investors in guaranteed securities) for financing agricultural real estate, including rural housing, and to provide greater liquidity to agricultural lenders. Increased competition among agricultural lenders participating in the secondary market should result in more favorable rates and terms for agricultural loans. In addition, Farmer Mac provides participating lenders with a new tool to improve their asset/liability management. Lenders eligible to participate include large and small agricultural banks, credit unions, insurance companies, agriculture cooperatives, and institutions of the Farm Credit System (FCS).

The existence of a secondary market should foster increased long-term fixed-rate mortgages which farm lenders have been reluctant to make in recent years. The reluctance stems largely from the difficulty lenders have in effectively matching interest rates and maturities of assets (loans) and liabilities (deposits and borrowed funds).

Farmer Mac will provide a guarantee of timely payment of principal and interest on securities backed by pools of eligible loans. These securities are not guaranteed by the United States, and are not "government securities". Unlike other government-sponsored agencies, such as Fannie Mae or Freddie Mac, Farmer Mac will not purchase loans but will, like Ginnie Mae, guarantee securities backed by pools of loans.

The board.—Farmer Mac is governed by a 15 member Board of Directors. Ten Board members are elected by stockholders and 5 are appointed by the President subject to Senate confirmation. The Permanent Board was first seated on March 2, 1989. Elected members are required to stand for election annually.

Since March 1989, Credit Underwriting, Loan Payment Security Appraisal, Loan Diversification, and Certified Facility (Pooler) Eligibility Standards have been developed, submitted to Congress for review, and are now effective. Application forms and agreements for pooler certification have been developed and distributed to potential poolers. In addition, the Farmer Mac Securities Guide, the detailed operating manual for originators and poolers, has been drafted and will be finalized and distributed to all stockholders by the end of December 1989.

Program participation.—Farmer Mac loans are to be made by loan originators. The only eligibility criteria for originators is ownership of a specified amount of Farmer Mac stock. Originators will sell loans to eligible poolers who will form pools and present them to Farmer Mac for evaluation and guarantee of the mortgage backed securities issued by the poolers. Capitol market investors, such as insurance companies, pension funds, and financial institutions, are the likely purchasers of the guaranteed securities.

Pooled loan characteristics.—Eligible loans under the program fall into two major categories. The first and estimated largest category is agricultural real estate loans which are secured by land and/or buildings affixed to land used for the production of one or more agricultural commodities or products.

The second category of eligible loans is rural housing mortgages for single family dwellings with market value not greater than $100,000 (adjusted for inflation since January 1988) in communities with populations not greater than 2,500.

To be eligible, an agricultural real estate loan must be no larger than $2.5 million, unless the real estate security for the loan is 1,000 acres or less. No loan may exceed 3.5% of the principal of a pool. Loans must be an obligation of a person or corporation having farming experience or training sufficient to ensure repayment of loans and who are actively engaged in farming.

Among other requirements, the Underwriting Standards specify that no loan may exceed a loan to value ratio of 75%. All loans must be secured with a first mortgage lien on the collateral property.

Financing.—There are three sources of financing for Farmer Mac: stock issuance; initial and annual guarantee fees which are assumed in the Budget display to be 25 basis points annually; and a $1.5 billion line of credit with the U.S. Treasury.

The actuarial soundness of the fee charged to poolers will be reviewed annually by the Comptroller General in a report submitted to Congress. The soundness of Farmer Mac pools will be determined through a multi-stage process. Loans must comply with the requirements of the Underwriting Standards as a first screen. Eligible loan pools will then be examined for geographic and commodity diversity consistent with the Farmer Mac standards and subjected to computerized economic stress analysis to determine pool performance characteristics. The Farmer Mac guarantee will be placed on pool securities only if the pool passes the evaluation process.

Available funds of Farmer Mac will be invested in U.S. or agency securities. No stock dividends are allowed under the Act until the Board determines that an adequate loss reserve has been funded to back Farmer Mac guarantees. This reserve, in addition to the subordinate securities or cash reserve in each pool, must be exhausted before the Treasury line of credit is tapped.

Guarantees.—There are statutory limits imposed per year through January 1991 on the amount of pooled securities Farmer Mac may guarantee. The limit is expressed as an annually increasing percent of outstanding agriculture real estate debt, excluding debt held by the Farmers Home Administration. This limitation does not apply to pools formed by the FCS.

Under the Farmer Mac program structure, guaranteed securities must be supported by a minimum 10% cash reserve or subordinated class of security. The Farmer Mac guarantee cannot be triggered for payment until the support mechanism has been totally exhausted. It is anticipated that subordinated securities in a pool will be retained by loan originators and poolers, but they can be sold to investors if a market for them develops. Pool funds will be distributed by the Farmer Mac Master Trustee, which will allocate payments received to the senior security holders first and then to the subordinated security holders to the extent that such funds are not otherwise needed to develop reserves to cover loan payment deficiencies.

Borrower rights (FCS).—FCS borrowers will certify in their loan applications whether they want to retain rights, or have their loan be eligible for sale in pool. Sold loans will retain no borrower rights. The FCS will establish interest rates and terms for each class of loans.

The 12 Federal Home Loan Banks were chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board under the authority of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act of 1932. Subsequent to the passage of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act (FIRREA) of 1989, the banks are under the supervision of the Federal Housing Finance Board. The banks are financial institutions whose main function is to supply their members—principally savings and loan-type institutions and savings banks—with credit to smooth their operations and enhance their service to the public as savings media and home-mortgage lenders. Each bank operates in a geographic district designated by the Board and together the banks cover all of the United States as well as Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam. In 1989, the banks extended credits of $244.9 billion and received repayments of $235.4 billion. Advances outstanding on September 30, 1989, totaled $151.1 billion.

The principal source of funds for the lending operation is the sale of consolidated obligations of the banks to the public. On September 30, 1989, $144.3 billion of these obligations were outstanding. The consolidated obligations are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government as to principal or interest. Other sources of lendable funds include a portion of members' deposits as determined by Board policy (total deposits were at $23.6 billion on September 30, 1989) and funds paid for the purchase of capital stock by member institutions. Funds not immediately used for advances to members are invested until such times as needed.

The capital stock of the Federal Home Loan Banks is owned entirely by the members. Initially the U.S. Government purchased stock of the banks in the amount of $125 million. The banks had repurchased the Government's investment in full by mid-1951.

The entire operating expenses of the banks are paid from their own income and are not included in the budget of the United States. Included in these expenses is the assessment by the Federal Housing Finance Board to cover the Board's administrative and other costs.

The staff size of the banks will decrease as personnel responsible for the supervision and examination of thrift institutions are transferred to the Office of Thrift Supervision, a bureau of the Treasury Department, subsequent to the passage of FIRREA.

FINANCING CORPORATION

The Financing Corporation (FICO) is a mixed-ownership government corporation, chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board pursuant to the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation Recapitalization Act of 1987, as amended (The "Act"). FICO's sole purpose is to function as a financing vehicle for the FSLIC Resolution Fund, formerly the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC). FICO operates under the supervision and control of the Federal Housing Finance Board (the "Board"). Pursuant to the Act, FICO is authorized to issue debentures, bonds and other obligations ("Obligations") subject to limitations contained in the Act, the net proceeds of which are to be used solely to purchase capital certificates issued by the FSLIC Resolution Fund, or to refund any previously issued obligations.

The Act provides formulas pursuant to which the Federal Home Loan Banks make capital contributions to FICO from time to time at the direction of the Board for the purchase of FICO capital stock. FICO uses the proceeds received from the sales of such capital stock to purchase noninterest bearing securities for deposit in a segregated account as required by the Act. The noninterest bearing securities held in the segregated account will be the primary source of repayment of the principal of the obligations. Securities in the segregated account are kept separate from other FICO accounts and funds but are not specifically pledged as collateral for the payment of obligations. The primary source of payment of interest on the obligations will be the receipt of assessments imposed on and collected from institutions' accounts which are insured by the Savings Association Insurance Fund (the "SAIF").

RESOLUTION FUNDING CORPORATION

The Resolution Funding Corporation (the "REFCORP") is a mixed-ownership government corporation established by Title V of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA). The sole purpose of REFCORP is to provide financing for the Resolution Trust Corporation (the "RTC"). Pursuant to FIRREA, REFCORP is authorized to issue debentures, bonds and other obligations, subject to limitations contained in the Act and regulations established by the Oversight Board of the RTC. The proceeds of the debt (less any discount, plus any premium, net of issuance cost) are to be used solely to purchase nonredeemable capital certificates of the RTC or to refund any previously issued obligations.

The Resolution Funding Corporation is subject to the general oversight and direction of the Oversight Board of the RTC. The day-to-day operations of REFCORP are under the management of a three-member Directorate comprised of the Director of the Office of Finance of the Federal Home Loan Banks and two members selected by the Oversight Board from among the presidents of the twelve Federal Home Loan Banks ("the FHLBanks"). Members of the Directorate serve without compensation, and REFCORP is not permitted to have any paid employees. The Resolution Funding Corporation and its Directorate are subject to regulations, orders and directions of the Oversight Board.

FIRREA and the regulations adopted by the Oversight Board provide formulas pursuant to which the Federal Home Loan Banks must make capital contributions to REFCORP's Principal Fund as well as interest payments on outstanding REFCORP Obligations. FIRREA also provides for other sources to fund REFCORP's Principal Fund and make the interest payments, with the U.S. Treasury responsible for any interest shortfall. Funds designated for the Principal Funds will be used to purchase Zero-coupon Bonds. The Zero-coupon Bonds will be held in the Principal Fund and are the primary source of repayment of the principal of the Obligations at maturity.

The Federal Reserve System operates under the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, as amended, and other acts of Congress.

Program.—To carry out its responsibilities under the Act, the Board determines general monetary, credit, and operating policies for the System as a whole and formulates the rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the Federal Reserve Act. The Board's principal duties consist of exerting an influence over credit conditions and supervising the Federal Reserve banks and member banks.

Financing.—Under the provisions of section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act, the Board of Governors levies upon the Federal Reserve banks, in proportion to their capital and surplus, an assessment sufficient to pay its estimated expenses. The Board, under the Act, determines and prescribes the manner in which its obligations are incurred and its expenses paid. Funds derived from assessments are deposited in the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, and the Act provides that such funds "shall not be construed to be Government funds or appropriated moneys." No Government appropriation is required to support operations of the Board.

The information presented pertains to Board operations only. Expenditures made on behalf of the Federal Reserve banks for production, issuance, retirement, and shipment of Federal Reserve notes are not included, since they are reimbursed in full by the Federal Reserve banks.

VI. GLOSSARY OF BUDGET TERMS

A-1229

GLOSSARY OF BUDGET TERMS [1]

BALANCES, OBLIGATED—Obligated balances are amounts of budgetary resources that have been obligated but not yet spent. (Cf. BALANCES, UNOBLIGATED.)

BALANCES, UNOBLIGATED—Unobligated balances are the amounts of budgetary resources that are available by law for obligation beyond the year in which they were provided and that have not yet been obligated or spent. (Cf. BALANCES, OBLIGATED.)

BUDGET—The Budget of the United States Government (this document) sets forth the President's comprehensive financial plan and indicates his priorities for the Federal Government. The budget document routinely includes the on-budget and off-budget totals and combines them to derive a total for Federal activity. (See ON-BUDGET and OFF-BUDGET.)

BUDGET AUTHORITY (BA)—Budget authority is the primary source of authority granted by law to enter into obligations that will result outlays. Budget authority most commonly is granted in the form of appropriations.

BUDGETARY RESOURCES—Budgetary resources refers generally to all sources of authority granted by law to enter into obligations, including new budget authority, new offsetting collections credited to appropriation and fund accounts, and unobligated balances of those resources.

DEFICIT—A deficit is the amount by which outlays exceed receipts.

FEDERAL FUNDS—Federal funds are the moneys collected and outlayed for the Government other than those designated as trust funds (defined below). Includes general, special, public enterprise, and intragovernmental funds.

FISCAL YEAR—The fiscal year is the Government's accounting period. It begins on October 1st and ends on September 30th, and is designated by the calendar year in which it ends.

GENERAL FUND—The general fund consists of accounts for receipts not earmarked by law for a specific purpose, the proceeds of general borrowing, and the expenditure of those moneys.

INTRAGOVERNMENTAL FUNDS—Intragovernmental funds are accounts for business-type or market-oriented activities conducted primarily within and between Government agencies and financed by offsetting collections that are credited directly to the fund.

OBLIGATIONS—Obligations are binding agreements for immediate or future outlays. Budgetary resources must be available before obligations can be incurred legally.

OFF-BUDGET TOTALS—Off-budget totals reflect the transactions of Government entities that are excluded from the on-budget totals by law.

OFFSETTING COLLECTIONS—Offsetting collections are collections from the public that result from business-type or market-oriented activities and collections from other Government accounts. These collections are deducted from gross disbursements in calculating outlays, rather than counted in receipt totals. Some are credited directly to appropriation or fund accounts; others, called offsetting receipts, are credited to receipts accounts. (Cf. RECEIPTS.)

ON-BUDGET—On-budget total reflect the transactions of all Federal Government entities except those excluded from the budget totals by law.

OUTLAYS—Outlays are the measure of Government spending. They are payments to liquidate obligations (other than the repayment of debt), net of refunds and offsetting collections. Outlays generally are recorded on a cash basis, but also include many cash-equivalent transactions and interest accrued on public issues of the public debt.

PUBLIC ENTERPRISE FUNDS—Public enterprise funds are accounts for business or market-oriented activities conducted primarily with the public and financed by collections credited directly to the account.
